

IN the presence of a large gathering of relatives and interested friends Miss Doris Ives and Mr. Paul Wilbur Masters, who for weeks have been the incentive for much entertaining, last evening were married with a pretty ceremony at Trinity Parish Church. The little edifice never looked prettier. It was massed with autumn foliage, palms, and white fall flowers and the altar was lighted with cathedral candles.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Lawrence Ives, was most dainty and attractive in her wedding robes of white satin and silver lace. The gown was made with the bodice of the satin, the neck outlined with white ostrich trimming which extended down the gown and along the sides of the skirt, which was slightly wired at the hips. The sleeves were of long silk tulle. The dress was short, but a court train of tulle fell from the shoulders far below the gown.

Over this was the long tulle veil, which was caught here and there with clusters of ostrich feathers and orange blossoms. The veil was held to the hair by a bandeau of two rows of pearl beads, while at one side was a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, orchids and gardenias. Miss Alice Ives, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of pink satin with an overdress of silver lace. The bodice was of silver cloth and trimmed with French flowers, which extended in a band over one shoulder. The gown was slightly wired over the hips and the French flowers trimmed the sides of the skirt. She wore a hat, the crown of which was of the pink satin and the brim of silk net. The hat flared in the front and was trimmed with the French flowers. She carried pink roses arranged in an arm bouquet.

There were four bridesmaids. Miss Katherine Jerome and Miss Cynthia Robertson, who wore pale blue gown with overdresses of silver lace with hats to match, and Miss Catherine Crawford and Miss Pauline Smith of Everett who were in orchid-colored satin with overdresses of silver lace. The bodices of all the gowns were of silver. The hats matched the gowns and the bouquets were of pink roses, tied with ribbon bows to match the gowns.

The best man was Mr. William Lewis, Jr., and the ushers were Mr. Robert Fox, Mr. Ned Shannon, Mr. Lawrence Calvert and Mr. Harold Speidel.

Rev. Henry Burton officiated.

Following the service a supper for the bridal party was given at the Seattle Tennis Club. The table was beautiful with bridal appointments and flowers. Mrs. Ives, mother of the bride, wore a gown of gray-beaded Georgette, finished with touches of orchid. Mr. and Mrs. Masters left for a short trip, after which they will be at home in this city.

Among the out-of-town guests present were Mrs. Irving Smith and Mr. and Mrs. David Hartley of Everett.

The bride is a most attractive, lovable girl, with a wealth of friends. She was formerly a student at the University of Washington and is a member of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority. Mr. Masters is the son of Mr. George Masters of California and was a student at the University of California. He is a member of Pi Psi Fraternity and only recently returned from France where he served for five months with the 35th Division.
