Those who care about the fate of the underclass can learn much from the experience of New York's Irish in the second half of the nineteenth century. The nation's first underclass-criminal, drunken, promiscuous, and shiftless, with high illegitimacy rates and thousands of abandoned children-the Irish had so dramatically improved themselves as to enter the American mainstream triumphantly by the turn of the century. The Catholic Church, rather than any government effort, was the main agent of their reclamation, and no Catholic institution shows more clearly just how that transformation was achieved than New York's Society for the Protection of Destitute Catholic Children, which most called the Catholic Protectory. In June 1893, 30 years after the Protectory took in its first wayward child, a national conference on charity took the measure of its success. "What crimes have been prevented," the conference report declared, "what homes have been made happy, what human misery has been alleviated, what brands have been salvaged from the burning, what myriads of useful men and women have been made an honor to the state by this institution, it is beyond the power of the human pen to record."

The Protectory was the creation of a remarkable New Yorker-by-adoption named Dr. Levi Silliman Ives, whom no one could have foreseen would have fathered such a creation. But in hindsight, it's clear that several strands in his personal history went straight into the making of the Protectory.

First was Ives's own early poverty. Born a Connecticut Yankee in 1797 into a Presbyterian family whose ancestor had come ashore in Massachusetts Bay in 1635, he grew up dirt-poor in a bark shelter in West Turin, New York, where his failed-businessman father had moved the family. Ives, his parents, and some of his nine younger siblings worked as ill-paid hired hands in a sawmill. Perhaps the poverty grated all the more on Ives because his parents were related to a constellation of prosperous and well-known New England families; indeed, his Revolutionary War-hero uncle, down the road in West Turin, was a well-off farmer.

When Ives was 15, he enlisted in the War of 1812, in keeping with a family history of fierce American patriotism. After the war, he enrolled at Hamilton College in Clinton, New York, but in his third year, felled by a serious respiratory illness, he dropped out. In 1815, while he was still at Hamilton, his father, "melancholy from want of prosperity," according to a contemporary, drowned himself (though one wonders whether the melancholy was the effect or the cause of the penury). Poverty, war, illness, a father's failure and suicide-these were Ives's tumultuous formative experiences. After he left West Turin, escaping his past, he had no further contact with his family and never mentioned them in his published writings or even in his surviving correspondence.

Ives's interest in religion kindled as he convalesced from illness; he soon took the first step in what would prove a long, restless spiritual quest. In this quest is visible the second of those character traits that led to the Protectory: the implacable intellectual honesty that led him to look closely at all available evidence and follow it to whatever conclusion it led.

While still in his teens, he took over a Presbyterian academy in Potsdam, New York, and gained a reputation as an electrifying revivalist preacher. But he had growing doubts about Presbyterianism, and, when he discovered the beauty of the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer and the writings of Episcopal bishop John Henry Hobart, rector of New York City's Trinity Church-America's biggest and richest parish-he wrote to him, confiding his doubts and asking for information about the Episcopal faith. The bishop invited him to New York, and, soon after, Ives entered Hobart's General Theological Seminary at Chelsea Square. Upon graduation in 1822, Ives became an Episcopal deacon and served in upstate New York and in Philadelphia. At the same time, he was courting Bishop Hobart's daughter, Rebecca, whom he married in 1825 and to whom he remained devoted his entire life. Two years later, he became rector of Saint Luke's Church in Greenwich Village, then still virtually suburban-and a long way from the bark shelter in West Turin. The congregation doubled during Ives's tenure and he turned down offers from bigger, more established parishes.

Tall, handsome, dedicated, and cerebral-a "practical ascetic," as his biographer John O'Grady rightly calls him-Ives was clearly a man on the rise in what was the religion of the American elites. In 1831, rising still further, he became Episcopal bishop of North Carolina.

It was among the destitute of that southern state that the last two personal qualities that bore fruit in the Protectory first blossomed: Ives's devotion to the poor and his talents as an institution builder. More missionary than theologian, he believed that to be truly Christian, one had to work directly with the poor-it was, he wrote, "what a man must do to be saved."

With its illness-breeding climate, North Carolina was a coarse and brutal place: public hangings provided a major source of popular entertainment. Among the state's illiterate, impoverished, and declining population, Ives found plenty of the poor to help. His chief rescue strategy was to found schools, as he would later do in founding the Protectory. In Raleigh, he established a school dedicated to providing faith-based values and a rigorous education to 100 or so students, most of them poor and ignorant boarders no older than 14-one of whom had traveled a month on horseback to attend the school from the banks of the Yazoo River in Mississippi. Educationally, the school was a great success, but financially, though its classes were filled to brimming, it failed, when the national economic crisis of 1837 dried up its funding. Even more ambitiously, with $400-much of it from New York friends-Ives bought an entire valley in the mountainous western part of North Carolina and set up a missionary school called Valle Crucis, modeled after an early Christian monastery and aimed at the poorest of the state's poor. But the money was too scant, and the wild mountain boys too unruly: this school failed, too. Ives learned from the failures that good intentions weren't sufficient for an institution to survive. You also had to pay attention to practical matters, such as raising money.

Ives's solicitude for the downtrodden extended to North Carolina's slaves. He was no abolitionist, but he worked to bring the Gospel both to slaves and to free blacks. He composed a catechism to use in teaching slaves, and he openly defended two plantation owners who had hired a full-time chaplain to teach their slaves religion. He encouraged plantation owners to treat their slaves well and to worship with them, believing that, as Christianity changed the culture over time, slavery might wither away. One scholar, Michael Taylor, sums up Ives's attitude thus: help individual slaves, but say nothing about the institution of slavery. We might gloss it differently: like the founder of Christianity, Ives left political revolution to others. The revolution that interested him was in the mind and heart.

While Ives pursued his philanthropic projects in North Carolina, his questing intellectual spirit was working deep, as yet subterranean, changes in his religious life. As he had risen in the Episcopal hierarchy, the Oxford Movement within the Anglican Church had taken fire in England, and it included some of the most brilliant minds in England-most notably, of course, John Henry Newman, who, like several other prominent members, later converted to Catholicism. The movement looked to the early Christian experience to grasp the true meaning of Christianity, which included, the Oxford writers believed, a strong emphasis on pastoral and charitable work. (The movement formulated the 12-step program that Alcoholics Anonymous and almost all addiction treatment groups use today.) Bishop Hobart had introduced Ives to the Oxford Movement as early as the mid-1820s. Its influence had grown within Ives as he ministered to the poor in North Carolina, and it began to lead him, waveringly though inexorably, down Newman's path to Rome.

As he later explained in his spiritual autobiography, a strangely withholding memoir that gives little real insight into the man's private self, the Episcopal Church he knew didn't answer for him the overwhelming need-if one were truly to be Christian-to walk with the poor. "Your churches and houses, and sympathies and charities," Ives wrote, stating the Gospel message as he understood it, "will be thrown widely open to them." But in the Episcopal Church of his time, Ives felt he "could see nothing which marked it as the hope and the home of the wretched; nothing which proclaimed its peculiar fellowship with the poor." Episcopal houses of worship, Ives thought, excluded the poor: "The very arrangement said aloud to the rich, 'sit thou here in a good place'; and to the poor, 'stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool.'" For Ives, who had known the humiliation of poverty, the Catholic Church satisfied his calling to help the destitute.

But imagine the painful dilemma he faced. Though conversion, he became convinced, offered him "peace of conscience, and the salvation of my soul," he later wrote, the idea of it filled him with "horror, . . . enhanced by the self-humiliation with which I saw such a step must cover me, the absolute deprivation of all mere temporal support which it must occasion, not only to myself, but to one whom I was bound 'to love and cherish until death.'" Ives indeed stood to lose the considerable worldly honor and eminence he had attained within the Episcopal Church. And Ives was right: what would it do to his wife? Her life had not been easy after she married him. The Iveses had lost both their young children to illness, a crushing blow. Rebecca Ives was frequently ill herself. She found the harshness of North Carolina and the distance from her family in New York hard to endure. And her father-Ives's great, almost fatherly, benefactor-was before his death in 1828 the very embodiment of American Episcopalianism. If Ives converted, wouldn't it betray Bishop Hobart's memory and force Rebecca to choose painfully between her husband and her late father?

But Ives always was faithful to the truth as he saw it-in all ways-however much pain and personal cost this might entail. Tormented, the 55-year-old cleric traveled to Rome in 1852 and became the first Protestant bishop since the Reformation to convert to Catholicism. Signaling Ives's prominence, it was Pope Pius IX who confirmed him into the Church the day after Christmas in 1852. A firestorm of controversy ensued, with the Protestant press and establishment denouncing Ives as mentally ill and bereft of integrity, and the Catholic press responding with a bizarre triumphalism, as though the Church had just won a high-profile sporting event. Ives's own brother came out against him and spoke, perhaps with their father's suicide in mind, of a family history of insanity.

When Ives returned from Rome in 1854, he settled in New York, which he had left 23 years earlier. No longer an exalted Episcopal bishop but now an ordinary Catholic layman, he would find his role ministering not to the city's elite, as he had from the pulpit of Saint Luke's, but to its most down-and-out denizens. The extraordinary archbishop of New York, "Dagger" John Hughes, ignoring the controversy that swirled around Ives, saw an imposing, learned man whose many talents he could use to help the Church. (See "How Dagger John Saved New York's Irish," Spring 1997.) Hughes at once put Ives to work teaching at Saint Joseph's Seminary, at the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Manhattanville, and at the Academy of Mount Saint Vincent in Westchester.

Hughes knew Ives would be an asset to the Church as an educator but soon learned that he would play an even more crucial role in the Church's charitable mission. Ives immediately joined the Society of Saint Vincent de Paul in Manhattanville and quickly became its New York leader. Formed in Paris during the 1830s as a Catholic response to socialist anticlericalism, class hatred, and political radicalism, the society took as its motto: go to the poor. It buried the dead, brought food, provided shelter, taught Sunday school, counseled alcoholics and troubled families, and cared for orphans, among many other intense, face-to-face ministrations to the poor.

New York City-and its Catholic Church-had no more pressing concern in the 1850s than to figure out what to do about the more than 60,000 abandoned, mostly illegitimate, Irish kids who roved the city in gangs with scary names like the Forty Thieves, the B'boys, and the Roach Gang, and terrorized citizens day and night. Thomas D'Arcy McGee, a tough Irish political exile, wanted to drum up opposition to the English among the New York Irish; instead, he found himself more frightened of Irish teen thugs in New York City than he was of English soldiers in Ireland. Ives was acutely aware of the depraved condition of the Irish kids. Never, he remarked, had he witnessed "a more utter disregard of honor, of truth and purity and even the common decencies of life."

Where did they come from? For Archbishop Hughes, whose views Ives shared, they were the products of Irish family breakdown-a reminder that today's underclass had a precursor with remarkably similar traits. Trying to figure out how to save the children of this broken community, Ives began to study how various charities actually worked. He was a model social scientist, for-just as in his religious quest-he let the data lead him to the truth instead of conforming it to a predisposed vision.

Nothing seemed to work, he soon discovered. If the failed policies seem familiar, it's because the modern social services industry still trots them out. One idea was to change the kids' environment and give them jobs. The government sent wild Irish city kids to midwestern farms, assuming that Calvinist hard work-and maybe the fresh air-would reform them. Ives knew it was bunk: "[I]f you take a vicious child from the streets of the city and send him to the farms," he observed, "what you get is a vicious farm worker." After all, taking a kid out of the slums isn't really changing his environment, as partisans of the farmwork solution believed; the environment that really counts for delinquent kids, Ives understood, is in their minds and hearts.

The government also tried the foster-home solution. The Saint Vincent de Paul Society did this, too, so Ives saw how it worked up close. Over time, he grew skeptical. "I had been in the practice of securing good homes for untrained and destitute Catholic children," he later said, "and although I succeeded in finding places for many, I can call to mind only a single instance where the child did not either abscond or prove ungovernable and worthless." Since these kids were largely unsocialized-no one had ever imposed structure on their lives, taught them moral values, or shown them love-they tended to be too much to handle even for the most well-intentioned family. As psychiatrist George Hogben puts it, "Most functioning families will not be willing to establish the intense psychological structure and rigid discipline such children require."

As Ives continued to search for an answer, he learned about the innovative charitable efforts of two East-Coast priests. Father George Haskins-like Ives, a former Episcopalian-ran a Catholic school in Boston that gave two years of intensive religious instruction to boys whom today we'd call "at risk." Haskins's school, Ives saw, had clearly improved the boys' behavior. In Baltimore, Father James Dolan tried something different. He stressed vocational training, but kept the boys in his home until they could support themselves. Here, too, Ives saw an improvement in the boys as they learned new skills. But both initiatives weren't by themselves enough, Ives believed. They needed to be combined.

Accordingly, Ives brought the Protectory into being, securing its charter from the State Legislature on April 14, 1863, and being elected president a few weeks later by an almost entirely Irish board of directors. The institution opened its doors in May 1863, in small rented quarters in two buildings on East 36th and 37th Streets. At first restricted to boys, the Protectory started its girls' division a few months later at the corner of 8th Street and Second Avenue. A little later, needing more room, the Protectory moved all its charges to two big rented buildings on 86th Street, near Fifth Avenue. The Christian Brothers, a lay group devoted to education, ran the boys' division; the Sisters of Charity, a religious order that looked after the sick and the destitute, took charge of the girls. In 1870, after Ives's death, the Protectory moved to a 114-acre site in Parkchester-then part of Westchester but now incorporated into the Bronx-that Ives had purchased in 1865. It operated there until it closed permanently in November 1938, when the city no longer had enough Catholic delinquents to fill it. Over the years, it sheltered more than 100,000 children, two-thirds of them boys.

In the Protectory's first annual report, Ives explained how it differed from other charities. It wanted to do something more for its charges, Ives suggested, "than merely rid the city of them, at great expense, for a few months, to return ... or to become to some other place a more grievous charge than when they left." Instead, it sought to raise them from a state of "indolence, stupidity and vice" to one in which they would "acknowledge their obligation to God, to their parents and to society." It would "raise them from their state of degradation and misery and . . . place them in a condition in which they have a fair chance to work out for themselves a better destiny." Ives sought, in short, to re-socialize young ruffians. "Our great aim," he stressed, "is to mould their hearts to the practice of virtue, and while we make them worthy citizens of our glorious Republic, to render them fit candidates for the heavenly mansions above." He had his work cut out for him: because of tight financial realities, he could only take in kids the courts handed over, since he would get additional public funds for them-about $120 per kid per year of the roughly $350 per-kid cost. Thus, Ives had mostly juvenile delinquents-the roughest Irish youth-under the Protectory's wing.

The key to re-socializing the children, Ives believed, lay in giving them a faith-based system of values. "Every child committed to this institution," he proclaimed, "will be thoroughly trained in the faith and morality of the Gospel as revealed and entrusted to the Catholic Church." On first sight, this might look like boilerplate, without much meaning except to believers. But recall that religion has a centuries-old experience in effectively teaching people the difference between right and wrong, and that some of the most up-to-date social thinkers have rediscovered inner-city ministries as one of the most effective agencies for redeeming underclass kids today. It's easy enough to understand what these ministers are doing, and why Ives was successful, in modern, purely psychological terms. The Protectory provided the clearest possible statement of right and wrong, confidently asserted that these values were absolute and backed up by divine authority, provided a discipline of practice and reflection that reinforced these values, held out complete forgiveness for past wrongdoing, and offered membership in a community organized around this code. Speaking more broadly still, Ives understood that at the center of the underclass condition is a moral and social void, and he knew how to fill it.

Respect was an essential component of the Protectory's moral lesson-respect for oneself, for parents, for other children, for teachers, and for God. Ives wanted to introduce the children to a world of obligations and make them aware that they weren't the sole arbiters of what they should and shouldn't do. He cultivated in them a host of ethical responsibilities where formerly there had been only caprice and impulse. Among other things, he made the Protectory children responsible for one another. "[I]t has occurred several times that a couple of our boys, having been sent on an errand to the city, have there fallen in with one who absconded, and have brought him back in triumph to the Protectory," Ives proudly observed.

One of the most effective disciplines the Protectory used to turn impulsive, often criminally inclined, children into personally responsible individuals was the sacrament of confession. Confession meant that each week the children had to examine their behavior, decide if it conformed to the ethical code they'd been taught, and take responsibility for it by confessing to a priest. Thus, they learned to reflect habitually on themselves and on morality, to lead an examined and responsible life.

The Protectory's Catholic teaching gave more than a stern set of dos and don'ts to these emotionally shipwrecked children. It offered them love and a sense of their own worthiness. If you keep the commandments, Ives's teachers told the children, God would be father and friend, offering an infinite and unshakable love. For children who had never known a parent's tender care, this was strong solace. The sacrament of the Eucharist had an equally positive psychological resonance for Protectory dependents, dramatizing to them that an all-powerful God had been willing to sacrifice his own son for their sake-that's how much they were worth. This teaching conveyed a powerful message of self-esteem, to use today's debased term.

Ives aimed to give the Protectory's children the means of making a living. He "resolved to cause these children . . . to be trained in some industrial occupation or mechanic art while they are instructed in all the essential branches of an English education." Vocational training also had a moral purpose, Ives believed, for it "diverts young minds from the evil suggestions of the tempter." "In the workshop," he added, "we have found the most direct and effectual corrective for an idle, vicious boy." As early as 1868, the Protectory had trained 185 boys as shoemakers, 45 as gardeners, and a half-dozen as bakers; 56 girls had learned how to make dresses. Twenty years later the Protectory had added stereotyping, blacksmithing, carpentry, tailoring, and other trades to its curriculum. By the turn of the century, the Protectory even trained many of its charges in electrical engineering, masonry, and plumbing. Ives was not turning out ditchdiggers.

Ives believed that classical and sacred music were crucial to a complete education. He launched a full brass band and a string orchestra at the Protectory. Playing in a band or orchestra taught kids how to play their parts exactly in a disciplined communal activity to which they were essential. Beyond that, the message of serious music is order, harmony, and transcendence, all in tune with the Protectory's teachings.

The inner and outer worlds of abandoned children are chaotic-to them, frighteningly so-and Ives understood those kids' special need for rigid structure, to provide them with a sense that the world is secure and predictable and to bring some order to their emotional lives. Everything at the Protectory took place according to an almost military schedule, providing the all-encompassing, minute-by-minute structure whose lack, as Ives perhaps intuited, is the reason even good foster care so often fails. The weekday began at 5:30 and provided slots for chapel and prayer, for meals, for classes and study periods, for shopwork or groundskeeping, for recess and even a little evening recreation time, and for lots of regimented, military-style drill for the boys and highly structured group dance routines for the girls. During the weekend, the kids had religious instruction and music. These wayward children, who once had time hanging heavy on their hands, now used almost every waking minute for self-improvement.

In sum, Ives sought a total inner transformation of the Protectory's wards. He wanted to educate them, give them useful skills, and, most of all, change their values and worldview. A practical man, he wasn't preparing children for the monastic life; he wanted them to be "worthy, influential and prosperous" in an America he described as "unsettled and money making"-not a bad description of present-day America. He wanted to instill in them the hope that, through hard work, they might support themselves and a family and even become wealthy.

Did Ives succeed? Did his Irish charges become self-reliant? According to historian George Paul Jacoby, the answer is an unambiguous yes. Boys found jobs when they left the Protectory, and, Jacoby observes, "many soon became very prosperous in the trades for which they were trained." In the single year of 1876, Jacoby records, the Protectory found positions for 186 children throughout New York, and in almost every case, "the result was gratifying." Some of the kids even went on to study the classics at university-a remarkable fact, given that the vast majority of them were more or less illiterate when they first came to the Protectory.

Outsiders who evaluated the Protectory were warm in their approval. In 1878, Elisha H. Harris of the U.S. Health Department praised the institution for cultivating in the children "obedience, order, cleanliness, and diligence," and, above all, "a reverence for their Creator and his divine behests." An 1893 National Conference on Charity and Correction viewed the Protectory as a model philanthropic enterprise: "He who visiting the Protectory on one of its holidays, notes the many gymnastic exercises or the splendid military drill through which the boys are put; their graceful delivery in the recitation of pieces; the sweet songs they sing, and the superb band of 75 pieces that discourses music more like professionals than amateurs; observes the boys in the base-ball field; looks into the work done by boys and girls in the class-room; or he who visits the workshops of the boys, and the serving-rooms of the girls, when in full operation, notes the industry and taste with which they perform their various duties-such a one can form some conception of the good that is accomplished by both departments of this institution." The conference pointed to other evidence in making its case, including enthusiastic endorsements from philanthropist William F. Barnard of the Five Points House of Industry in 1878 and from a state committee on the causes of crime in 1882.

Another testament to the Protectory's success is the quality of the goods its workshops produced. The Protectory's shoes, dresses, and other products drew high praise, even from across the ocean. Leading London papers, including the Times, the Standard, and the Globe, as well as Dublin's Freeman, dispensed such praise as: "The women's shoes are of the very neatest, most finely finished, and of the best make," or "the handiwork shown is of a remarkably high order," or yet again, "these specimens of work are really startling, and go to show what may be done with the classes of youth which in earlier years have had but few, if any, opportunities for development or self-help." Skilled craftsmen are rare and the product of much cultivation, and to get such high-quality work-the kind of work that mobilizes so many human potentialities-from this human material is a sure sign that Ives's grand project was doing something profoundly right.

Additional evidence for the Protectory's success comes from the often moving testimonies from former charges that appear in the Protectory News, a literate and chatty newsletter the institution began to publish in 1910. One issue from the World War I period closed with a story of a former pupil, Edward Farley, now a soldier, who had promised his devout mother that he would wear a ribbon on his arm until he had stained his soul with mortal sin. As he lay dying from wounds received in battle, Farley told the chaplain attending to him to make sure his mother knew that he had worn the ribbon right up to the moment he died.

A 1910 issue of the News offered this success story: "After 44 years," wrote Peter M. Gillen, "I can never forget you and your kindness to me and your untiring efforts to instill in me the necessary education. I became . . . a first-class book and newspaper compositor and for more than 20 years held the post of proof reader on the World, Herald, and Tribune. I have been married 34 years, having had 12 children. . . . Two of my children are musicians (pianists) in great demand and who earn good money."

The editor praises another letter, from Archie Reilly, for its absence of all "etymological and syntactical errors." Reilly writes: "Mr. Deery is a very nice gentleman and is affording me every opportunity of learning the business of wholesale Quarry agents. I am also studying shorthand and am quite sure I shall succeed in learning it thoroughly. I find myself getting along nicely and have splendid hopes that with the blessing of God, perseverance and an abundance of energy, I may have a bright future." Reilly couldn't have offered a more fitting restatement of Ives's hopes in founding the Catholic Protectory.

Ives's influence spread. In Baltimore, Archbishop Spalding modeled the Saint Mary's Industrial School after the Protectory, and schools soon opened in California, Illinois, Kentucky, and Missouri that looked to it as a major influence. Parochial schools nationwide embraced Ives's approach, and Ives himself traveled the country evangelizing for his ideas on charity. In his last years, which he spent at Saint Joseph's Cottage on 138th Street near Broadway, Ives received a multitude of visitors from across the country, who sought his advice on how to establish and run charitable organizations. He died on October 14, 1867, just after his friends lifted up his head so that he could look one last time at Domenichino's sublime painting The Last Communion of Saint Jerome. Fittingly, he was buried on the grounds of the Catholic Protectory. The poet John Savage summed up Ives's dedication to New York's Irish poor: "His tender sympathies, and the necessities so sadly prominent in a great city, naturally led him to good works."

His example sheds light on the quiet struggle that has recently broken out for the soul of Catholic Charities, the $2.25 billion social services behemoth of which Ives was a founder. On one side, the organization's leadership echoes the social services industry's party line. Typical is the complaint of president Fred Kammer, a Jesuit, that the welfare-reform debate a couple of years ago had "focused almost exclusively on personal responsibility" and had ignored "the right to suitable employment and just and adequate wages." On the other side, critics like Senator Rick Santorum object that, if Catholic Charities is "only going to be a more efficient bureaucracy, if [it is] not going to feed the souls as well as the stomach, then why exist?" Santorum and his allies reflect the guiding spirit Ives brought to Catholic Charities a century ago. The fact that Ives's approach worked so well powerfully argues in favor of the Santorum point of view.

Today, as Catholic Charities USA-the central office-pursues the expansion of the welfare state, there's less and less religion in its mission and less and less understanding of Ives's central insight that for charity to succeed, it must change the cultural attitudes of its recipients. It's a pity, since the welfare state can't solve the social problems-from illegitimacy to drug addiction-that we face at the end of the twentieth century. Certainly, Catholic Charities would be immeasurably more a force for good if it rediscovered the wisdom of Levi Silliman Ives. And our entire national effort to help the underclass would benefit immeasurably from reflecting on his example of changing the inner culture of the poor, too.

The Ives family papers constitute correspondence primarily of relatives of Rev. Levi Silliman Ives. In addition, the collection includes correspondence by Joseph Moss Ives, the brother of the renowned composer,Charles Edward Ives, and by the former's son, Walter Bigelow Ives. Levi Silliman and Joseph Moss Ives were both descendants of William Ives who arrived in Boston, Massachusetts, from London in 1635, and was one of the original settlers of Quinnipiac (New Haven), Connecticut, in 1638. There does seem to be a tie between the former two and I.M. Ives or Ella Gilbert Ives. The collection was part of the Old Archives of Georgetown University.It is likely that these papers were placed together based simply on the similarity of the surnames. The history of the acquisition cannot now be traced. Since most of the collection consists of correspondence written to the Georgetown presidents of the times (e.g., Patrick Healy, S.J.; Coleman Nevils, S.J.; John B. Creeden, S.J.) it is logical that it should have ended up in the university's archives . One might also deduce that as far as the relatives (i.e., Edward, Eugene, and Frank Ives) of Levi Silliman Ives were concerned, a genuine love of their alma mater was reason enough to deposit the family papers at Georgetown. The size of the collection is 0.25 linear feet and is arranged chronologically beginning with the earliest material, that of Rev. Levi Silliman Ives.

Brief biographies of the main figures of the correspondence in this collection follow.

Levi Silliman Ives (Sept. 16, 1797-Oct.13, 1867) was born in Meriden,Connecticut, son of Levi and Fanny Silliman Ives. Early education was at the Lowville Academy, New York, where his family had moved. After serving in the War of 1812, Ives enrolled at Hamilton College in 1816, but did not graduate because of illness . In 1819 he affiliated with the Protestant Episcopal Church and studied under Bishop J.H. Hobart whose daughter, Rebecca, he married in 1822. That year he was ordained a deacon by Bishop Hobart, in 1823 a priest, and was finally consecrated bishop of North Carolina in 1831. Ives was attracted to the Oxford Movement while studying about the Protestant revolt in England. Subsequently, he founded the brotherhood of the Holy Cross at Valle Crucis, North Carolina, and in 1848 was arraigned before the Episcopalian Church for heterodox practices, but was pardoned after dissolving the brotherhood. On December 22, 1852, while visiting Rome, he resigned his see, and was accepted into the Catholic church together with his wife. He wrote a "defense" of his conversion in 1853 "Trials of a Mind in its Progress to Catholicism." After some years abroad, Ives returned to New York as an English instructor at St. John's College and St. Joseph's Seminary. His remains are buried at the Catholic Male Protectory, New York, of which he was founder and first president.

Ives was born at Meriden, Connecticut and was brought up on his father's farm in Turin, New York. Ives served during the first year of the War of 1812 and studied at Hamilton College, but in 1819 left the Presbyterian for the Episcopal Church, and studied in New York under Bishop John Henry Hobart, whose daughter, Rebecca, he married in 1822. That year he was ordained a deacon by Bishop Hobart. In 1823 he was ordained a priest in Philadelphia by Bishop William White.

Ives was rector of Trinity Church, Southwark, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, from 1823 to 1827; later he served as assistant minister at Trinity Church, New York, and as rector at St. James Church, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, until 1831.

Ives was elected bishop of North Carolina in 1831. He was the 25th bishop of the ECUSA, and was consecrated by bishops William White, Henry Ustick Onderdonk, and Benjamin Treadwell Onderdonk. As a bishop he took great interest in the education and religious training of the black community. Having become deeply attracted to the Oxford Movement while studying Church history, Ives founded a religious community called the Brotherhood of the Holy Cross at Valle Crucis, North Carolina. Its members, a few clergymen and zealous laymen, observed a community rule and preached Tractarian ideas.[4] Observers grew worried, however, that Ives had started to move away from the teachings of the Episcopal Church and was embracing "Romish" practices such as private confession to a priest and prayers to the Virgin Mary and the saints. In 1848 he was arraigned before the Episcopal Church for heterodox practices, but was pardoned after dissolving the Brotherhood[1] and providing a written pledge that he would prohibit any liturgical practice not authorized by the Episcopal Church in the Book of Common Prayer.

Despite these concessions, Ives's theological convictions continued to evolve until he was no longer able to accept that his denomination was a branch of the true Catholic church. In 1852, after obtaining a six-month leave of absence, the 55-year-old cleric left for Europe with his wife. They went to Rome, where, on December 22, 1852, he sent a letter to the Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in North Carolina resigning his office of Bishop of North Carolina in view of his decision to join the Catholic Church. Ives was the first Protestant bishop since the 17th Century to convert to Catholicism. Signalling his prominence, it was Pope Pius IX who received him into the Church on December 26, 1852. Some months later, his wife, too, converted to Catholicism.

In the spring of 1854 Ives published his apologia, The Trials of a Mind in its Progress to Catholicism. After two years in Rome, the Iveses returned to New York. As a lay Roman Catholic, whose marriage barred him from the priesthood, Ives spent his last years as a professor of rhetoric at St. John's College (now Fordham University). He also lectured at St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie and the convents of the Sacred Heart and Sisters of Charity, as well as concerning himself in charity work.

The Story of Valle Crucis
We know that there has been an Episcopal presence in this valley since about 1842.

Bishop L. Silliman IvesIn 1840, a botanist from New York came through this valley and was struck by its remoteness and natural beauty. On his way back to New York, he stopped in Raleigh and spoke with Bishop Levi Silliman Ives, who at that time oversaw the Diocese of North Carolina, which comprised the entire state. In July 1842, Bishop Ives traveled to this area, held services, and talked to the people he met. He promised to "send them, the moment it should be in my power, a Missionary, who should teach them the rudiments of knowledge, and preach to them the word of God." Legend has it that Bishop Ives saw the image of a St. Andrew’s Cross, in either the two streams in the valley, or in their accompanying mist, and named this valley Valle Crucis, which is Latin for Vale of the Cross. There is also an abbey in Wales that shares the name.

During the next few years, Bishop Ives bought about 2,000 acres, much of it with his own money. He started a building project, of which only the Bishop Ives cabin still stands today. Bishop Ives had a dream of starting a monastic order in Valle Crucis - the first monastic order in the Anglican Church since the English Reformation. Bishop Ives bought a large shipment of cattle from Pennsylvania and hired an experienced farmer to run his farm operation, William West Skiles. Mr. Skiles became invaluable to Bishop Ives and the local people. In August 1847, he was ordained as a Deacon and took monastic orders in the Society of the Holy Cross. However, many in the Anglican Church of that time thought that this society was too “Roman,” and forced Bishop Ives to disband his order in 1852. The Bishop then left for Europe, where he resigned as Bishop and converted to Roman Catholicism.

Brother Skiles took over the work in the valley and became the doctor, lawyer, farmer, and priest to the people here. He built St. John's Church. He died only four months after its dedication, on December 8, 1862. After his death, much of the church's work came to a halt. It was not until 1895 that Bishop Cheshire came to Valle Crucis to revive the work of the church. The Taylor family, who had bought much of the land from the church, gave him three acres; he built the Mission House and the original Church of the Holy Cross (now Crab Orchard Hall).

In 1898, Bishop Junius M. Horner became the new Bishop of the Asheville Diocese. He was known for his belief in education, and he set out to acquire as much of the original Bishop Ives land as he could. Bishop Ives had owned the land personally and had sold the land when he left North Carolina. Horner purchased 500 acres by 1903. On this 500 acres in the next decade, apple orchards were set out, a herd of registered Holstein cattle was brought in from Ohio to start a dairy, timber was cut, and a saw mill and wagon factory were built. A power plant was constructed to provide power for the new school and surrounding area, with the idea that the new mission school could pay for itself. There were barns built to store apples and to house dairy cattle. Both were two-story structures and are still standing a century later, though the dairy barn is now a wedding venue and meeting space, and the apple storage barn now houses youth groups as the Bunk House.

By 1910, new buildings were started upon the hill. The first, known locally as the Auxiliary Hall, was a dormitory, an assembly hall, three classrooms, a dining room and a kitchen. (It burned in 1919, tragically killing a student and a teacher, and was replaced by the Annex on the same spot.) Hugh A. Dobbins was in charge of Valle Crucis. Eighty-two attended Sunday School and ninety-nine students attended the "Agricultural and Industrial School" - 45 girl boarders and 54 boy day students. Classes were from primary through high school and provided training in kitchen, laundry, housework, and weaving for the girls, and farming, blacksmithing, woodworking, and wagon making for the boys. They had a chaplain, a principal, five academic and two industrial teachers.Auchmuty Hall ca. 1911

The wonderful Auchmuty Hall, the main three story building with a porch that wraps around three sides, was funded by a generous philanthropist from New York and completed in 1911. The school and all its buildings and land were valued at $45,000 in 1911.

In 1925, the church had outgrown its building by the Mission House and money was raised to build a fine stone church on the hill overlooking the valley. Holy Cross Church remains an active and dynamic parish today.

In 1934, the National Episcopal Church, suffering from the Great Depression, withdrew its support. In 1936, the school became a girls-only boarding school. It struggled over the next few years and, with teacher shortages and dwindling student support, closed in 1942.

Original Holy Cross Church, now Crab Orchard Hall

In 1940 a big flood swept through the valley, forever changing the streams and the nature of this place. Many buildings were swept away and some lives were lost in this tragic event. Over the next few decades, the school again became a missionary training school. In 1967, most of the apple orchards were cut down and in the 1970's, the Mission School was transformed into the Valle Crucis Conference Center. Today it thrives once again, serving groups of people with common cause. They range from youth groups on skiing trips, to Diocesan events, to vestries, to women's groups, and to many non-profit groups.

The symbol for the Valle Crucis Conference Center is a Celtic Cross with the words "deeply rooted on sacred ground" underneath. This symbol reminds us of the cross of Jesus and the circle of life that intertwines all of our being with each other."

"South of the Whiting farm was the large one belonging to the Ives family. The old house stood, in fact stands, in the dwelling of George B. Murdock. Buried in the depths of this modern house is the kernel or nucleus of the one built by John Ives at an early date. (some doubt about this, but the site is the same). ???? In the year 1723 he appears to have taken up his residence in the parish of Meriden. He died in 1738 and the house and east part of his farm passed into the possession of his son, Captain Bezaleel. He died in 1798, and his only child, Captain Samuel, then became the owner and at his death in 1803, it became the property of Ivah Curtis, who had married his daughter Hannah. Here was born Rev. Samuel Ives Curtis, whose son Rev. Samuel Ives Curtis, Jr.. lately deceased, was ….a great …scholar and prof. of theology. …The farm of John Ives was a large one, comprising several hundred acres and stretched down on both sides of the highway nearly to the town line or farm of Amos Camp. His son, John, in the division of his father's estate, took the western part and probably built the house many will remember as the Othniel Ives place, a few hundred feet west of the dwelling of Mr. Murdock. It was erected very likely about the year 1745. It was bought many years ago by J. George Schwink and perhaps 10 years ago was burned to the ground. In it was born levi Ives, who was the father of Levi Silliman Ives, who became the Protestant Episcopal bishop of North Carolina. In the year 1852 he ..embraced the Roman Catholic faith. The Ives family has always been numerous and influential on meriden and the old records abound in frequent evidences of this fact."

From personal Correspondence, Marion Willis 22 Feb 1983:

About 1858 all hell broke loose in Goshen: a child of Cornelia's and Edwin's, Charles, died in a tragic fire at the sawmill; various of Mineas Ives' grandchildren, his daughter Mary Ann's kins, showed signs of T.B. and Mary Ann's brother-in-law, one of the Lyman's, was intent upon starting a church in the west, financed by the Goshen Home Mission Society.

A whole slew of Goshen residents started out for El Paso, IL, including Edwin, Cornelia, all their brood, and Mary Ann and her family, all but one daughter who was too sick to travel. She died in Goshen very soon after they left.

Once in Illinois, though, things didn't go much better. One of Mary Ann's sons died in a Civil War camp; between 1863 and 1867 all the rest of her children (ages 18 to 30) died.

Cornelia, that lady of firm convictions, wasn't about to let her family disappear in the same way her nieces and nephews had done. Besides, she had a brother in Scranton, and there were a lot of friends from Goshen and other Connecticut towns there doing very well as the city grew, as the railroads and coal interests expanded.

So, Cornelia put her foot down; when the rest of the El Paso crew decided to migrate to Winfield, Kansas. she decreed that they should instead go east to Scranton. One of the most interesting facts is that on all of these moves, Old Mineas was along. He must have been a tough old bird; he went to Illinois at seventy plus in age, and to Kansas when he was nearly 80. He died in Kansas in 1883, while living with Mary Ann, and other children, age 96.

Winfield Courier, February 15, 1883.

DIED. Father Ives, one of the oldest residents of the county and of Ninnescah Township, died Monday evening. He was in his ninety-fifty year, and was stout and hearty up to ninety. He had been all his life strictly temperate in everything, never using tobacco or liquor in any form.

From SueAnne Warr McClory, 3 Nav 2014 --

David -

'Got to thinking'…. this obit says the Ives family left CT on the day Lincoln was shot. That would disprove the story of them leaving behind a Lyman child, Helen, because she died in 1863. It would also explain how Daniel Lyman was buried in Goshen after dying of disease in the Civil War in 1862. So the time frame for them being in El Paso, IL is about 7 years, all leaving in 1872. I love the pieces of the puzzle....

Additional information for Sarah Banks Ives:
From Valerie Nail 30 Match 2010:

I also have a typed letter (someone transcribed) that was originally written by Sarah B. Dodge of Olympia, Washington (Maiden name Ives and the B standing for her mothers maiden name) to her brother Joseph Ives of Jackson, Michigan dated March 4, 1860. She describes where they first lived in Oregon and how much better it was in Washington for the farmers and economy. She also goes on to state how disappointed she is about the care of her mother if she would have known she would have brought her mom with them. She speaks of many other family affairs including the state of Samuels estate, of brother John losing his farm and now living with brother Henry.. etc.

John Dodge. Born on 30 Dec 1808 in Utica Co., New York. John died in Mudd Bay or Mima, Washington on 19 Dec 1891 at the age of 82. Also seen listed as Jonathan. An interesting fact on John Dodge and Sarah Banks Ives: Excerpt taken from "Pioneer Reminiscences" page 357 discussing the Natches Pass, Cascades, WA:

"In the spring of 1853 Mr. and Mrs. Himes with their family of four children, George H, Helen Z., Judson W. and Lestina Z., and four other persons, Joel Risdon and his son, Henry, a youth of 12 years, Charles R. Fitch and Frederick Burnett, and the additional family of John Dodge, wife and five children, Robert Bruce, Francis Marion, Daniel, Samuel Ives and Desdemona, started across the plains to Oregon.

The two families separated at the immigrant camp ground on the Umatilla River, the Dodge family going to Marion County, Willamette Valley, and the Himes family and the four persons mentioned went to Puget Sound, via Natchez Pass, 25 miles north of Mt. Rainier, in company with a number of other families and single men, the total number being 70-the first direct immigration to the Puget Sound basin.

Late in 1853 Robert Bruce Dodge left the Williamette Valley and settled in Mima Prairie; his parents and the remainder of the family soon followed him and settled in the same locality."

In 1835 when John was 26, he married Sarah Banks Ives, daughter of Thaddeus Ives (28 Sep 1771-1839) & Hannah Cotton (26 May 1782-6 Aug 1865), in Susquehanna, Pennsylvania. Born on 27 Nov 1811 in Crawford Co., Pennsylvania. Sarah Banks died in Mc Lane, Washington on 29 Jan 1890; she was 78.

Additional information for Jacob Ives:

Personal communication, James Harvey Ives --

Jacob (RN=1216) and Olive (Quackenbush) (RN=1274) Ives

Jacob Ives (RN=1216) is listed as a child of Christopher (RN=1215) in Landmarks of Rensselaer County by George Baker Anderson, pub. 1897, and Hudson-Mohawk Genealogical and Family Memoirs by Cuyler Reynolds, pub. 1911.

The History of Rensselaer Co., New York by Nathaniel Bartlett Sylvester, pub. 1880, states, "Lazarus Ives came from Connecticut before the Revolutionary war, and located about a mile north of the village of Poestenkill, where he leased several hundred acres of land, and engaged in farming and stock-raising. He had several sons, who settled in town, among whom were Christopher and Lazarus... Christopher had Abijah, Truman, John and Jacob, sons, who settled in town, and whose representatives are still in the county.

Jacob, born 8 Jan 1789, in the town of Poestenkill; he was a farmer and lumberman; he was a great wrestler when a young man. In 1848 he removed to the western park of the state, and in 1851 removed to Illinois, where he died in 1853. His wife was Olive Quackenbush; she died in 1849.

Jacob was engaged in Albany for a time, probably in real estate or farm agency. It is likely that he met in that city the girl that he later married and bought a home for in Poestenkill. Jacob knew the industrial lines of the pioneer. He was by turn a lumberman, a farmer and a speculator in the purchase and sale of leased farms, and continued in the line until the end of his life.

The name of his mother developed in a recorded deed of Christopher Ives to Jacob of the small farm lying between the stock farm and Christopher's lease. That small farm of 25 acres had been purchased by the pioneer to bring the two farms together. The pioneer had deeded it to Christopher, conditioned however to reserve a two acre burial plot with Christopher's boundary line as a family cemetery. Christopher's deed to Jacob made the reservation. In that deed, Christopher describes him as the "Son of Lydia, also called Ives." The deed was further reserved by a condition that Jacob should annually pay his mother one-third of the product of the 23 acre farm during the term of her life.

The Genealogy records his marriage at Albany to Olive Quackenbush on 22 July 1809. She was named as great granddaughter of Sybrant Quackenbush, an Albany soldier captured and tortured by Indians in the massacre of a convoy of supplies to Fort William Henry in 1750. He was said to have been held a slave six years in Canada, finally escaped and returned to Albany to marry the girl he was engaged to; she had not given him up.

Real estate records indicate that Jacob Ives received title and disposed of several farm leases. He lived on the farm deeded to him by Christopher Ives a score of years later. About 1845 he turned his business and farm over to his son, Jacob Ives, Jr., and went out to live in Genessee County. Olive died about 1849.Jacob(went then to Dekalb in Illinois and died there in 1853, age 64. Their youngest child was born in 1834 when Jacob was 45 and Olive had not passed the age of childbearing.

From: 444.joycetice.com/books/brookout.htm --

Titus Ive's daughter Susannah went on horseback to De Puy's mill at Tioga, taking a second horse to put the grain upon, and made the trip successfully,

From: http://www.joycetice.com/1897/ch34.htm --

Stephen Lane, a son of Joseph and Susannah (Ives) Lane, was born in Danville, New York, in 1812. His father died in 1814, and his mother, who was a daughter of Titus Ives, a pioneer settler on Troup's creek, returned to Brookfield township, where Stephen grew to manhood and settled on the farm now owned by his son, William G. Lane.

Brookfield's most celebrated murder (it actually happened in New York State) was the killing of Sam Ives by Robert Douglas. In 1824, Douglas, only nineteen years old, was a hardened criminal, wanted for many crimes. Previously he had defrauded Ives with a counterfeit Bank of Ontario banknote and Ives had vowed vengeance. He saw Douglas passing by and pursued and attacked him and during the struggle Douglas stabbed Ives several times with a dagger. Ives died and after a celebrated manhunt, Douglas was captured near Cameron N.Y. He was convicted and hanged at Bath N.Y. A complete account of the murder and trial is found in the Free Press issue of June 8th, 1888.

From: http://genealogytrails.com/ny/steuben/blacksheep_douglass.htm --

MURDER. - A man named Troupsburgh, in Steuben county, (N.Y.) was stabbed last week by a fellow named Douglass, while attempting to arrest him on a charge of counterfeiting and theft. Troupsburgh died in about 20 minutes, and Douglass has made his escape, although instantly pursued by the people, who had turned out en masse in several towns to apprehend him.

Portland Gazette (Portland, Maine) Sep. 14, 1824.

A Murderer Apprehended. - A few days ago we published an account of the murder of Samuel Ives, of Troupsburgh, Steuben co. by Robert Douglass, who made his escape into the woods. We now learn that after having been out a number of days, hunger drove him to enter the barn of Mr. James Hallet to solicit food, when he was seized and conducted to jail, where he is now in safe keeping. Six or eight persons have been arrested on suspicion of being confederates of Douglass in counterfeiting, stealing, &c., and some fifteen more, are implicated. Among the number arrested are Abraham Hathaway and James Wallace, alias Tallar, both supposed to be old offenders. Their place of rendezvous was at the house of Thomas Mayberry, the father in-law of D. where large parcels of goods, watches, &c. were found. - Alb. Gaz.

Ballston Spa Gazette (Ballston Spa, NY) September 14, 1824.

The following article, from the Susquehannah Republican, furnishes intelligence of the discomfiture and partial detection of a gang of thieves and counterfeiters -

Murder and Counterfeiting. - A man by the name of Douglass, was apprehended in Steuben county, N.Y. a few days since for the murder of a traveller, from Baltimore, whose name we have not learned. We are informed the murder was committed in an affray or dispute which occurred in consequence of Douglass having imposed upon the stranger with counterfeit bank notes. After the horrid deed was committed, Douglass fled to the woods, and the inhabitants, of the whole country, more than two thousand persons, including two or three regiments of the militia, are said to have volunteered in search of the murderer, and after several days fatigue, being nearly starved, he was induced to surrender without resistance. - During the search a cave in one of the hills was found, which was appropriated to the purpose of manufacturing counterfeit bills, and a kind of store house for stolen goods, where the most extensive scheme for counterfeiting was discovered that we have before heard of. Numerous letters were found in possession of the villains, from which it appeared that there was a complete organized corps of counterfeiters extending over a great part of the U. States and Canada, having a regular correspondence with each other from their several stations. We understand the letters are in possession of the Sheriff of Steuben county, who will have them in safe keeping, and which will furnish a clue to some of the villains who have long been engaged in this desperate traffic. The names of the correspondents will not be exposed until measures can be taken to apprehend them, but we understand some of them were dated at Baltimore, in Canada, and even at the village of Meansville. This section of the country, has long been pestered more than any other, with counterfeit bank notes, and we hope that the discoveries made in this affair will have a salutary effect in checking this desperate swindling. We understand that seven of the counterfeiters were committed to the Bath jail, and that eleven others were aprehended and were to undergo an examination on Wednesday last.

Boston Commercial Gaette (Boston, Massachusetts) September 23, 1824.

ROBBERS AND MURDERERS.

We are indebted to the politeness of a friend, for being able to publish the following information, received from a gentleman of respectability residing at Big Flat, in the State of New-York. The letter from which we take our extract is dated Sept. 1.

Last week, as one of the Tuscarora tribe of indians, by the name of Robert Douglass, who had been in Bath jail, for passing counterfeit money, and had been bailed out, was passing a Mr. Ives, to whom he had passed the money, a fight ensued between them, when Douglass drew a dirk and stabbed Ives three times, so that he died in about ten minutes. Douglass fled to the woods, and immediate pursuit was made by the Sheriff and his posse. During the pursuit, a cave was discovered, which contained two boxes, a bed, and chairs; a trunk was also afterwards found, which contained silks, seven watches, and 352 dollars counterfeit money. The sheriff, after this, proceeded to search the house of a man by the name of Maybury, where he found 51 watches hid under a floor; a bloody shirt was found upstairs, concealed among some dried pumpkins; two cravats were also found concealed in and under bed, one of which was cut in two or three places, but in such a manner that when the cravat was folded up, it made but one cut. A silver watch was also found, marked with the same letters as the shirt and cravats. The day after this, the search being continued, $1000 of good money were found concealed behind Maybury's chimney, and subsequently another chest was discovered, containing valuable silks and other goods to the amount, as is supposed, of six hundred dollars.

The Farmer's Cabinet (Amherst, New Hampshire) September 25, 1824.

Trial for murder. - At Bath, Steuben county, on the 12th of January, Robert Douglass was tried for the murder of Samuel H. Ives. The trial occupied the entire day, when the jury retired, and between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning of the 13th, came into court with a verdict. guilty of murder. The next day the prisoner was brought up to receive sentence, when his counsel moved an arrest of judgment, on the ground of irregularity in the (?) of the jury while out. It was shown, that when absent, two of the jury separated from the others, and went and obtained provisions and whiskey, and had held conversation relating to the trial with persons not of the jury. The court respited the sentence, and the prisoner was remanded to jail.

New York Spectator (New York, NY) February 4, 1825.

New trial for murder. - During the present term of the Supreme Court, in this city, a new trial has been granted to -------- Douglass, lately convicted of murder, in Steuben county. It appears that during the former trial the jury had leave of the court to retire, under the charge of a constable; that two of them separated from the rest, had conversation with other persons, who went into a grocery and got something to drink, and for this irregular act a new trial has been granted.

Alb. Dai. Adv.

Portland Advertiser (Portland, Maine) March 19, 1825.

At a Court of Oyer and Terminer held at Bath, Steuben county, last week, Judge Rochester presiding, Robert Douglass was tried a second time for the murder of Samuel H. Ivies, and convicted. He was sentenced to be hanged on the last Friday in April.

Douglass, it will be recollected, was tried and convicted at the last term in Steuben co. A motion was made for a new trial, on the ground that some of the jury who tried the cause, during a recess of a few moments, which was granted by the court, had held conversations with some of the citizens on the subject of the trial; and also, that one or two of them had drank a iritous 1 quote. The sentence of the court was postponed, and the application referred to the Supreme Court at Albany, where a new trial was ordered, which took place as above mentioned.

The Rochester Telegraph (Rochester, NY) March 29, 1825.

Robert Douglass, charged with the murder of Samuel H. Ives, received his second trial at the late Circuit Court in Bath, Steuben county - was again found guilty, and sentenced to be hung on the last Friday in this month.

Peter Halton, was convicted of arson and sentenced to state-prison for 14 years, for burning the house of Mr. Benham, of Painted Post. The jury decided, that the house was uninhabited, because the family were gone to meeting, at the time the act was committed! This nice distinction saved the prisoner's neck from the halter.

"Birds of a feather." At the same court, Thomas Maberry was sentenced to the state-prison for receiving stolen goods - His wife is now in the state-prison for the same offence.

Ithaca Journal (Ithaca, NY) March 30, 1825.

At the last term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, held at Bath, Stuben county, Robert Douglass was tried a second time for the murder of Samuel H. Ives. He was found guilty, and sentenced to be executed on the last Friday in this month. It will be recollected, that this case was before the Supreme Court some weeks since, when it was in evidence that the jury who were on the first trial had separated, and some of them went to a tavern. The Court ordered a new trial.

New York Spectator (New York, NY) April 8, 1825.

Robert Douglas was executed at Bath, Steuben County, N.Y. on the 1st inst. for the murder of one Ives. He was weak, and very much affected. He died uttering these broken accents, "O God, must I die! O God, must it be so!" He made no confession, and left the public totally ignorant of the place of his nativity, and who are his relatives. He persisted that he died innocent - that his killing Ives was not intentional, and what he did was done in his own defence. He was 24 years of age.

New Hampshire Sentinel (Keene, New Hampshire) May 20, 1825.

EXECUTION. - Robt. Douglass was executed at Bath, Steuben county, on the 1st inst. agreeable to the sentence passed upon him for the murder of Samuel H. Ives. he was led from his cell between 11 and 12 o'clock, and escorted by several military companies to the place of execution. When he arrived, it is said he was too feeble to ascend the scaffold without assistance, and soon after sunk down almost helpless. During the religious exercise he was much affected and often called on God for mercy. About half an hour before the execution it was mentioned to him by one of the ministers that if he had any thing to say to the world before his exit, then was the time. He replyed that he had nothing to say only that he died innocent of the crime for which he suffered; that his killing Ives was not intentional, and what he did was done in his own defence. He took an affectionate leave of his attendants, and at 2 o'clock was launched into eternity. It is said no man ever met his fate with greater reluctance. He made no confession at any time after he received the sentence of death, and left the public totally ignorant of the place of his nativity and who are his relatives. He was about 24 years of age.

Portland Advertiser (Portland, Maine) May 24, 1825.

Executed, at Bath, N.Y. Robert Douglass, aged 24, for the murder of Samuel H. Ives. He met death with great reluctance, swooned before he was swung off, and would give no account of himself or family. - Boston pap.

Connecticut Herald (New Haven, Connecticut) May 31, 1825.

The first great outpouring of the people of Osceola which arose to the magnitude of a general movement was to attend the execution of Douglass at Bath, N. Y. It took place in 1825. He had murdered Samuel H. Ives the 23d of August 1824. As was the custom in those days the execution was public. It was treated as a holiday occasion. Men, women and children in great multitudes stood about the scaffold in a drenching rain to see the wretched creature swung off. Several persons from Osceola who were present are yet living.

THE SUSQUEHANNA DEMOCRAT 1825

11 February 1825

Robert DOUGLASS, having murdered Samuel H. IVES about the 25th of August previous at Troopsburg, Bath County, N. Y. has been tried by the Court of Oyer and Terminer for that county and found guilty of murder, but in consequence of the illegal proceedings of some of the Jurors prior to giving in their verdict, his sentence was suspended. It is supposed a new trial will be granted him.

Robert A. Douglas first came to Canistio Valley in the Spring of 1824. That summer he became a peddler selling not only dry goods and notions, but jewelry as well. In the light of later information, this was significant. Events now moved swiftly in that remote neighborhood. Certain other persons with reputations not too good had attached themselves to the Mayberry family. These men- Hathaway, Cole and Wallace-were no kin of the Mayberry's nor did they appear to have any visible means of support. Several peddlers who were known to have entered the valley at Painted Post; and were supposed to have put up for the night at the Mayberry Tavern, were never again seen. A girl who had been employed as kitchen help at the inn, but had been discharged, told a weird story to some of the neighbors. She said that after retiring for the night, she heard a noise in the living room. Rising to see what was the matter, she found that she had been locked in her room. But she peered through the keyhole and was horrified to see Robert A. Douglas, assisted by his mother -in-law, Mrs. Mayberry, engaged in cutting the throat of a peddler whom they had tied to a chair. Willing as they were to listen to tales of horror, this yarn seemed a bit too strong, and the people had not made up their minds to accept this at face value, when news of a tragedy brought them up on their toes. Samuel H. Ives, a resident of Grigg's Corners, in the town of Troupsburg, had made some purchases of Douglas on one of his rounds. After the peddler had gone Ives found that a five dollar counterfeit bill had been worked off on him. Being of a choleric disposition, Ives resolved to seek justice himself, if the law would not function. It was about the middle of September and Ives was eating his midday meal when his hired girl, chancing to glance out of the open door, exclaimed: "There goes that counterfeiter.!" Ives heaved himself from his chair and rushed out of doors.. "He'll give me back my money," he growled "or I'll take it out of his hide!"He ran toward Douglas. "Hey, you! Wait!" He extended the bogus note toward the peddler. " Give me back my money. This bill is no good." Nonchalantly, Douglas inspected the note. " I didn't give it to you. I never saw it before." Ives didn't believe in wasting words. He sprang for the young man's throat. But the peddler avoided the assault and fled down the road. Ives gave chase, caught his man and hurled him to the ground, kneeling on his chest. The Douglas, squirming like and eel in Ives' powerful grasp, drew a knife and stabbed his assailant. The weapon sank deep in the farmer's side. Ives groaned, staggered to his house, dropped on a bed and almost immediately died. A few days later he was buried in the cemetery at Austinburg, near the state line.

Additional information for William Jackson Ives:
Personal communication from Richard W Ives, 9 Feb 2016 --
"William Jackson Ives was quite a character. Drove a peddler wagon to Alabama in 1832-33, eventually opened a store in Benton, Alabama, which he ran right up to the moment when a Union force burned it to the ground, at a loss to him of $80,000. He returned to Connecticut, got rich and died there in 1887, a well-respected citizen. If you have not already found it, there is a nice little piece about William in An Historic Record and Pictorial Description of the Town of Meriden, p. 391 (available at Google Books.)"

"WASHINGTON M. IVES, a prosperous farmer in Johnson Hollow, was born March 2, 1819, in that part of the town of Windham, Greene County, N. Y., now known as Prattsville. His grandfather, Samuel Ives, was born in Wallingsford, Conn., and was descended from two of the "Mayflower's" passengers. He was engaged in farming in Connecticut, whence he removed to Greene County, settling at Lexington, which was formed from Windham in 1813. He was a minute-man in the Revolution, a Whig in politics, and a member of the Reformed church. He lived to a good old age, as did his wife, Julia. Their children were: Samuel; Romie R.; Daniel: Caleb; Julia, who became Mrs. Baldwin; Catherine, who married Mr. Ringe; Lola, who married John Ives; Betsey, who married Mr. Steele; Ann, who became Mrs. Page; Keziah, who married C. Mattoon; and Ahna, who married a Mr. Crooker.

The eldest son, Samuel, was born in Connecticut. He bought the farm in Prattsville now owned by D. W. Hyatt; and in 1826 he moved to Johnson Hollow, Delaware County. Here he engaged extensively in farming and lumbering, and lived to his death, at the age of eighty-four years. He was a Whig in politics, and was drafted in the War of 1812. His wife was Betsey Fairchild, daughter of one of the early settlers; and she died when forty-six years of age, a member of the Reformed church. Their children were: Jonathan R., Samuel P., Washington M., Calista M., Nancy M., Alma C., Betsey A., Helen M.

Washington M. Ives attended the district school, and worked on the farm until twenty-five years of age. After the death of his father he purchased the interests of the other heirs in the old homestead, which comprised one hundred and fifty-six acres. In 1843 he married Harriet N. Meeker, who was born May 28, 1822, daughter of Philo and Gertrude (Scott) Meeker, residents of Roxbury. Mr. and Mrs. Ives had six children, namely: William, who was born July 18, 1845, and died February 33, 1851; Philo, who was born February 18, 1847, and whose first wife, Alida Stevens, died, leaving one child, after which he married Alida Laverick, by whom he had three children; Mary S., born September 6, 1849, now the widow of William F. Fenn, of Prattsville, who died, leaving five children; Homer M., who was born December 7, 1851, married Lucy Morgan, resides at Ohio, and has lost his wife and one child; John W., born November 5, 1853, who married Adella Chalfield, and is a machinist in Ohio; S. Parker, born November 3, 1858, who married Alma Tuttle, now lives at the old homestead with his wife and three children. Mrs. Ives died October 1, 1890, a member of the Reformed church.

Mr. Ives continued in the industry of farming, and erected the buildings now on his farm, which is situated in Johnson Hollow, and was the first to be settled in this section of the country. He has two hundred acres of land and twenty-five grade cows. He was Captain of the State militia, and is a Republican in politics. Mr. Ives is an energetic and industrious man, and his flourishing and well-managed farm shows the thrift and prosperity of its owner. "

758. ELAM BURR[7] IVES (Lent[6], Andrew[5], Thomas[4], Joseph Deacon[3], John[2], William[1]) was born at Cheshire on 23 November 1778,[8690] baptized in 1810, and he died at Colborne, Ontario, Canada on 8 June 1848.[8691] He was buried at Salem Cemetery, Salem, Cramahe Township, Northumberland County, Ontario, Canada in June 1848. He married Lucinda Curtis Hamlin Follett at Kings, Nova Scotia, Canada on 1 April 1810.[8692] She was born on 27 May 1779, and she died on 5 November 1848.[8693]

Additional information for Elam Burr Ives:

personal communication from James Lott Ives, 16 March 2013 --

"Hi Lori and David....I have looked over The 2 pdf files and find that they are incorret about Julius Mortimer Ives being born in Nova Scotia.

He was born in the United States (according to the 1851 census . Nova Scotia is a province on the east coast of Canada, north of the State of Maine.

Although there were some Loyalists that immigrated to Nova Scotia, Arthur Coon Ives' book " The Ives Family" 1928 is very precise and definitive that Elam Burr Ives came to Canada in approximately 1811(after Julius was born) and was given a land grant (to Loyalists) in the Grafton area. He is buried in the Salem Cemetery east of Grafton and Colborne Ontario, along with 33 other relatives.

He was a doctor and travelled on horseback from his home, east to Toronto and west to Kingston. In 1813, his is listed as the secretary of Prince Edward Masonic Lodge No. 18 in Picton, Ontario. We assume that he must have been a mason when he immigrated from Onieda, New York because the Picton Lodge was established in 1811 and to be Secretary, he was probably a past master. He obviously made his visits to the Picton area to coincide with the monthly lodge meetings. I have a photo copy of a membership certificate issued to a Guy Henry Young in 1813 with Elam B. Ives as secretary.

Our direct ancestory line is as follows: William 1, John 2, Joseph 3, Thomas 4, Andrew 5, Lent 6, Elam Burr 7, Julius Mortimer 8, Ira 9, James Blake 10, James Bertram 11, James Lott 12, James Blake 13 (no children)

I have a lot of documentation from the booklet "The Ives Connection" written and researched in 1988 by Ruth E. Law of Uxbridge, Ontario. She was an Ives following the line of Elam Burr Junior who was a son of Ira. She is dead now but I bought a copy of her works and helped her with our present family lines.

Hope this helps.....Dad

PS David please feel free to e-mail me with any questions . Jim"

Elam Burr Ives who was apparently a doctor and came to Canada as a Loyalist around 1811-12 from Oneida County New York (now Watertown area). He must have been a Mason and must have been educated at Yale or some other medical school.

"Source: Lindsay Bach- Dr. Elam Burr Ives took a land grant near Grafton circa 1815. Elam Burr Ives was said to be the first saddleback doctor between Kingston and Toronto. Elam is buried in Salem Cemetary where most of the Ives and the early pioneers of Colborne are buried."

From: http://archive.org/stream/heritagelodge2011free/heritagelodge2011free_djvu.txt -

"This is illustrated by an old certificate for a member of Prince Edward Lodge, Bro. Guy Henry Young and dated 1813. This certificate is now in the Archives of Prince Edward Lodge. The hand-drawn certificate has the information on it written in arcs converging right and left, in the form of a globe. The text reads: " Upper Canada. We, the presiding Officers of Prince Edward Lodge, have conferred the Sublime Degree of Master Mason upon our duly qualified Brother, the Bearer, Guy Henry Young, Who as a true and faithful brother of the Masonic family is hereby recommended to be favourable notice and Protection of every Free and Accepted Mason on the Globe. As a Testimonial the seal of our Lodge is fixed, A.D. 5813. Bela Johnson,W.M.; David Cornwell, S.W.; Benjamin Hubbs, J.W.; and Elam B. Ives, secretary."

"From this certificate we learn of one of those very interesting, dedicated masons of those days. I want like to comment and refer to the Secretary that appears on the Certificate, Bro. Elam B. Ives.

" Elam Burr Ives, could have been the first doctor in Ontario between Kingston and Toronto. He rode on horse back to visit his patients. Elam received a grant of land along, probably at Lakeshore, south-west of Colborne." 8 Little is known about Bro. Elam Ives affiliation with the Prince Edward Lodge other than his office as Secretary. We are very fortunate that the Ives family in the Untied States have been able to trace their family tree back to when they immigrated to North America. This has been documented and dates to the passenger list of the log of the boat known as the True Love Passengership, September 1635 when William Ives 28 yrs., landed from England. 9

Elam , a direct descendent is believed to have immigrated to Grafton, Ontario from Oneida New York.

Bro. Elam Burr Ives is the great, great, great, great grandfather of one of our members of Prince Edward Lodge, Bro. James Lott Ives. This is a very true masonic family with many Masonic Affliations such as the following, William Lott initiated into Moira Lodge in 1883, others who have Masters In Gannanoque and District Deputy Grand Master of Frontenac District. I would to thanks Bro Ives for allowing me to use some of the material in this representation."

Ives, Isaac, M.D. (deceased), -- In the records of medical history in Kendall County, a name that occurs very frequently is that of Dr. Isaac Ives, whose ministrations soothed the sick and dying, and whose skill saved many lives, although after coming to this section he was not actively engaged in medical practice. However, whenever called, the venerable physician always responded, and endeared himself to all who knew him, by whom he is tenderly remembered. Dr. Ives was born in Cornwell, Vt., May 14, 1798, son of Enos and Ruth (Bingham) Ives, who were also natives of Vermont, but in later years settled in Chautauqua County, N.Y., which continued to be their home throughout life. They were of English descent, their ancestors coming to the American colonies at an early day. Isaac Ives grew up in New York State, but after reaching maturity, returned to Vermont, where he entered Castleton Medical College, and was graduated from that institution in 1824. Soon thereafter, he began the practice of his profession at Whiting, Vt., there continuing for twenty-one years. One May 5, 1825, he married Mehitable Moulton, born in Orsell, Vt., March 25, 1798, daughter of Ephraim and Matilda (Lyon) Moulton. In June 1846, Dr. Ives moved his family to Kendall County, Ill., coming by way of the Erie Canal from Whitehall, N.Y., to Buffalo, and thence on the Great Lakes to Chicago, then an unattractive village, and there the little party took teams to reach their destination, then a thriving settlement, Cambridge, later called Pavilion, where he lived until his death. After coming to Kendall County, he practically retired from his profession, although as said before, he responded to calls made upon his knowledge. Dr. Ives was a great Bible student, and after arrival in this county, was ordained to the ministry, and for some years preached. In his early days he was a Baptist, but after arriving in Kendall County, became connected with the Methodist Church. After the formation of the Republican party, he voted its ticket, and held a number of offices, but accepted none after coming to Illinois. His death occurred July 28, 1872. His widow survived until November 5, 1879. They were the parents of eight children, three of whom died in infancy, the others being: Ruth A., who died at the age of eighty-two years, married Dr. George Ryon and lived at Amboy, Ill,; Adelaide M., who married Norton Harris, died in 1900, at the age of sixty-eight years; Caroline E., who married John B. Luce, died in 1906, aged seventy-two years; Calantha M., who married Chester Ament, now lives in Yorkville; and Jemima S., who now lives on and owns the old homestead, a lady respected and esteemed by all who know her. Dr. Ives was a man of unblemished character and high standard of living. Broad in his sympathies, he was very charitable, and did much good of which the world knew nothing. He was Postmaster at Pavillion [sic] {Pavilion} for eighteen years, and in 1883, his daughter, Miss Jemima S. Ives, was appointed to that position, and held it for fourteen years, and at the same time kept a general store, so that the community is indebted to two members of the Ives family for faithful administration of public matters.

The Colorado River Exploring Expedition

While E. F. Beale was building his wagon road across northern Arizona, the United States army organized an expedition to investigate the navigability of the Colorado River for possible use as a transportation corridor into California, Utah, and New Mexico, which then included Arizona. Lieutenant Joseph Christmas Ives, who had been with Whipple's railroad survey a few years earlier, was selected to command the expedition.

Ives hired several experienced men to help him: John S. Newberry, paleobotanist and geologist; Heinrich Baldwin Möllhausen, natural historian and artist and Baron F.W. von Egloffstein, topographer and artist. He had a shallow-draught steamboat constructed and shipped to the mouth of the Colorado River in pieces. The boat, named the Explorer, was assembled in the lower delta and then used to explore the river most of the way to Las Vegas Wash.
Ives's steamboat "the Explorer."

When the river exploration was complete, Ives sent the boat downriver and converted to pack mules to travel eastward cross-country to the settlements in New Mexico. Along the way, they became the first European Americans to visit the Colorado River at the bottom of the Grand Canyon. They also were the first to follow the Havasupai Trail to the bottom of the canyon.

Another first that came out of this expedition was a new style of map drawing invented by Frederick von Egloffstein for the official expedition maps. Instead of tediously-drawn hachures to show terrain relief features, Egloffstein used a shaded relief style, which is still preferred for modern maps. He also had to invent and patent a usable halftone printing process in order to successfully print his new continuous tone maps.

"In January 1858, Lt. Joseph Ives set out from Yuma in the steamship Explorer to determine how far boats could go upriver on the mighty Colorado. While still within sight of amused spectators at Fort Yuma, his pilot ran the boat aground. This would happen many more times, usually to the delight of Indians gathered on the riverbank who knew the river and could predict the groundings.

Further detracting from the expedition's glory, Yuma-based riverman George Alonzo Johnson beat Ives to the punch by running one of his boats upriver into Black Canyon several weeks before Ives. Johnson had offered Ives his services and the use of one of his boats. Ives rejected the offer; in a fit of competitive spirit, Johnson decided to do it first.

Despite this inauspicious beginning, Ives's expedition was a crowning achievement of the Army's splendid Corps of Topographical Engineers. Historian William H. Goetzmann acknowledged it as "one of the most remarkable American explorations of the nineteenth century."

Going was very difficult. In one notable three-day period, they made only nine miles. Slow progress was frustrating, but was undoubtedly beneficial to the expedition's scientific work, which they handled with extraordinary skill.

Among the achievements cited by historian Goetzmann was the expedition's contact and generally friendly relations with largely unknown Indian tribes. The Indians were curious and often helpful as guides. Ives occasionally invited a few aboard the boat. Once, he proudly showed off his brass-rimmed compass. His visitors were fascinated but, observed Ives (who was never very self-effacing), once the Indians understood what the device was for, they thought he must not be very smart to need it to tell him which way he was going. In a charming aside, Ives recounted with some pride that he made a speech to a group of Indians without once mentioning "the Great White Father in Washington."

Churning upriver, they passed the mouth of the Bill Williams River, which Ives had followed a few years earlier as an assistant to Lt. Amiel Whipple. Further on, near the Needles, they passed the spots where Capt. Lorenzo Sitgreaves came overland to the Colorado and where Lt. Edward Beale and his camels recently crossed. Those explorations were looking for potential railroad routes; Ives wanted to see if the river could become a highway.

Ives pressed the ungainly Explorer up several rapids, eventually entering Black Canyon not far from today's Hoover Dam before striking one last rock and declaring that spot to be the head of navigation. Ives sent the Explorer back to Yuma while he and part of his crew rowed a skiff further upriver as far as Las Vegas Wash. They determined that the Mormon Road into Utah was not far to the west, and that the Virgin River was close by. Either of these would provide a route into Utah if the Army needed to move against the independence-minded Mormon settlers."

"Joseph Christmas Ives was born on Christmas Day, 1829. An enterprising youth, he took to engineering, eventually gaining degrees from Bowdain College in Maine and West Point. At the tender age of 28, Joesph was given the task of exploring up the Colorado River from its mouth at the Gulf of California. For the task, he designed and built is own steamboat, The Explorer, and assembled a crack team of scientists to study the resources of the mighty Colorado. His expedition moved swiftly upriver until their ship crashed as they approached Black Canyon, in modern Lake Mead National Recreation Area. From there, they continued via skiff for thirty miles and eventually on foot-ultimately reaching the edge of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. Thus, Ives is thought to be the first European American to stand at the bottom of the Grand Canyon.

Ives returned east and wrote up his findings in a Report upon the Colorado River of the West. And while he lauded the scale and geology of the region, his report was not highly complementary of the canyon country. In fact, his description of the Grand Canyon is perhaps most markedly negative:

Another reconnaissance has since been made on foot from the lagoons westward…An excellent view was had of the Big cañon…Our reconnoitering parties have now been out in all directions, and everywhere have been headed off by impassable obstacles. The positions of the main water-courses have been determined with considerable accuracy. The region last explored is, of course, altogether valueless. It can be approached only from the south, and after entering it there is nothing to do but leave. Ours has been the first, and will doubtless be the last, party of whites to visit this profitless locality. It seems intended by nature that the Colorado river, along the greater portion of its lonely and majestic way, shall be forever unvisited and undisturbed…The deer, the antelope, the birds, even the smaller reptiles, all of which frequent the adjacent territory have deserted this uninhabitable district.

Ives was, of course, wrong. In 2018 alone, Grand Canyon National Park hosted 6.38 million visits. A 2017 study found that the canyon brings $938 million dollars to the region annually. The total value of the canyon is immeasurable. It is lauded as one of the Seven Wonders of the World and has been designated as a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

For Joseph Christmas Ives, the story of ignorance doesn't end there either. Despite his Yankee roots, he would eventually defect from the army to join the Confederacy during the Civil War and fight to continue the enslavement of African Americans. He would die shortly thereafter."

Grand Canyon was the last largely unexplored area of the West in 1857. Often called "The Great Unknown" it was literally a blank space on maps. It was known that the Colorado River made a significant portion of its journey through this area, so the federal government funded an expedition to explore the river and determine its usefulness as a trade route.

Army First Lieutenant Joseph Christmas Ives of the U.S. Army Corps of Topographical Engineers took on the adventure. He navigated up river using a fifty-foot long sternwheel steamboat, the Explorer. His plan was to steam up the Colorado River from the known into the unknown.

Artwork from the Ives expedition was very dark, depicting the canyon as a terrifying place.

He crashed just below Black Canyon, not yet in Grand Canyon itself, but continued upriver for another thirty miles in a skiff. Continuing on foot, his overland journey took him down into the canyon at Diamond Creek, today part of the Hualapai Indian Reservation. He is thus credited as the first European American known to reach the river within Grand Canyon.

In his Report upon the Colorado River of the West; Explored in 1857 and 1858 (Washington: GPO, 1861), Ives admires the canyon's scenery:
"The extent and magnitude of the system of canyons is astounding. The plateau is cut into shreds by these gigantic chasms, and resembles a vast ruin. Belts of country miles in width have been swept away, leaving only isolated mountains standing in the gap. Fissures so profound that the eye cannot penetrate their depths are separated by walls whose thickness one can almost span, and slender spires that seem to be tottering upon their bases shoot up thousands of feet from the vaults below."

But he could not envision that the scenery alone would bring millions to view the wonder of the canyon. He also writes:

"The region is, of course, altogether valueless. It can be approached only from the south, and after entering it there is nothing to do but leave. Ours has been the first, and will doubtless be the last, party of whites to visit this profitless locality. It seems intended by nature that the Colorado river, along the greater portion of its lonely and majestic way, shall be forever unvisited and undisturbed."

Thayer's Notes:

a Joseph Ives' middle name and birthdate are from a bare genealogical entry on p65 of Arthur Coon Ives, Genealogy of the Ives Family, Including a History of the Early Settlements and the movement from Quinnipiac to the Black River Country (Watertown, NY: 1928 although © 1932). The only other passage of the book mentioning Col. Ives - to give him his Confederate Army rank - is of some length and interest:

p160 In the South we encounter a member of our family whose career seems of enough general interest to deserve special mention - Joseph Christmas, son of Ansel Wilmot and Lucia Ives, Cheshire family. We quote freely from a letter received in answer to a request for facts concerning his life:

"Lieutenant Joseph C. Ives was in charge of a party that surveyed the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and, as a matter of record, his maps and books on that exploration trip are on file both in the hydrographic office and war department. He also explored the Everglades of Florida, making the only official and authentic maps and surveys in use" before the World War. This was done prior to his trip to the Colorado. Previous to the Civil war, Lieut. Ives had one of the most brilliant records in the U. S. Army's engineering corps. Another little known fact is that he was one of the original engineers on the Washington Monument.

"It was during the Colorado expedition that the Civil war broke out, and he left the Union army and joined the Confederate forces. He first served on General Indicates a West Point graduate and gives his Class.Robert E. Lee's staff as engineer officer, and was later taken on President p161Indicates a West Point graduate and gives his Class.Jefferson Davis' staff as chief engineer. Lieut. Ives (then Colonel Ives) planned and built the defences of Richmond, Va.

a1 "After the Civil war he drops into comparative obscurity, as he was one of the few officers who were not included in the general pardon issued by Abraham Lincoln. This technicality was due to the fact that, at the time of the outbreak of the war, he was in Colorado; and before reached his party the war had been going on for some time. He immediately sent in his resignation, which was not accepted, and he was declared a deserter. It was not until many years after his death that this was taken from his record, and he was pardoned."

Concerning his exploration of the Grand Canyon, we read that Mr. Ives first tried to enter this "mystical canyon" from the "desert below," but was driven back, "baffled and disheartened." After days of "wearisome journeyings" in an attempt to enter the canyon from above, he wrote: "This region can be approached only from the south, and after entering it there is nothing to do but to leave. Ours has been the first, and will doubtless be the last party of whites to visit this profitless locality."

The career of Lieutenant Ives was a colorful one. We are glad to record his achievements and to learn that he is buried in the Arlington Cemetery.

The book, and thus this passage of course, is in the public domain, the 1932 copyright not having been renewed in 1959 or 1960.

I've been unable to confirm that Col. Ives is indeed buried at Arlington.

b Joseph C. Ives has become famous for having written of the Grand Canyon, in his Report upon the Colorado River of the West; Explored in 1857 and 1858 (Washington, D. C., Government Printing Office, 1861), p30:

"The region . . . is, of course, altogether valueless. It can be approached only from the south, and after entering it, there is nothing to do but leave. Ours has been the first and the last party of whites to visit this profitless locality. It seems intended by nature that the Colorado River, along the greater portion of its lonely and majestic way, shall be unvisited and undisturbed."

What those who gleefully report this fail to mention is that great chunks of the same report are taken up by rapturous descriptions of the beauty of the Canyon and other landscapes of the Far West; and although some one hundred and forty million people are said to have "seen" the Grand Canyon, the vast majority of us have done so very summarily from some carefully arranged vantage point. Very few know it to any real extent, and most of it sees no human being for years on end, exactly as Lt. Ives said.

c As with other Confederate officers, Cullum's Register omits his war record. He was an aide-de-camp to President Davis, with the rank of Colonel; and it was in that capacity that - he seems to have a gift for quotability - when asked whether Robert E. Lee had the audacity required in war, he made his famous assessment of the general (Freeman, R. E. Lee, II.92). "

"E-MAIL: FROM: Candi IVES, 9 Oct 2002: My great great grandfather Allen Ives, born 15 Feb 1828, Miami Co., Ohio, married Mary Deeter (Deiter) born 21 Mar 1831, Covington, Ohio. Allen's father, name unknown, was born Vermont. Allen's mother, name unknown, could be Mary but possibly referred to as Polly. Allen Ives was a Brethren preacher and had churches in Burr Oak, Kansas, and Washington. One article found in Burr Oak, KS, Church of the Brethren, stated that in "1871 Allen and Polly Ives settled on the present sit of Burr Oak". But Allen Ives was married to Mary, so Polly could not be his wife. Possibly his mother because Allen's father died when Allen was a young boy and Allen cared for his elderly mother. Some researcher believes that Allen possibly had a brother named Oren and a sister named Joanna. I have not been able to find the father and mother's names. Does any of this information ring a bell with you? Thanks, ---Candi Ives"

"Oren and Allen Ives were brothers whose family history begins with them; two little boys whose father died at an early age, leaving them to make their way in life in the American Frontier without his protection and guidance. For 40 years, I have searched for a record of their parents´ names with small results. What is known of their early lives came to me from a descendant of Allen Ives, Babe Erickson, from a record found in Bible of Charles Ives, a descendent of Allen Ives. The story is as follows:
Allen and Oren´s parents met and married in Vermont. ``Father´´ Ives was from born in Fisherman, Scotland and his wife, Mary (called Polly) was from Ireland. (My great grandmother, Oren Ives' daughter Maggie May, said her father was Dutch and English.) They settled in Darke County, Ohio where Allen was born on February 15, 1828. They had moved to Miami County, Ohio by 1835, where Oren was born. When Allen was seven years old and Oren was a baby, they went from Covington, Ohio to Wolf Lake, Indiana, presumably to establish a homestead. A third child, Johanna, was born there. They had just gotten the house built when ``Father´´ somehow fell off a little dock into the lake and drowned. Mary took her two little boys and baby daughter and walked back through country populated by wild animals to Covington, Ohio. This was a terrible situation for this young mother. She was a widow with three children and apparently had no relatives in the area as census records do not indicate that she was a part of any household, so she did what was necessary to survive. Allen was about eight years old by that time, and he was bound out as a servant for his keep to a man named Levi Deeter. He worked without pay until he was 18 years old. Miami County marriage records show that Alexander Ives married Mary Deeter (his employer´s daughter), on October 26, 1848.

According to the family story, Mary married a man named Frank Singer. Miami County marriage records show that ``Polly´´ Ives married Benedict Singer on July 1, 1839. The date fits, the last name is correct and one can assume that a man named Benedict might take the name of Frank in his everyday life. A listing in the 1860 Census for Wabash County, Indiana shows Benedict Singer (65) living with John Singer (41) and his family, wife Lidia (38) and son Aaron (5). Benedict Singer´s birthplace is listed as Pennsylvania and he was born in 1794. Many residents of Ohio migrated on to Indiana and Iowa in the mid 1800s so it is likely that this was Mary Ives´ second husband. A message listing on Genealogy.com by one of Allen Ives´ descendants states that Mary was divorced in 1840 after having at least one son by Benedict Singer. What happened to Mary after that I have been unable to discover."

"His father was drowned when the boy was 5 years old."

From: http://trees.ancestry.com/tree/28730376/story/70d70053-1e22-4abc-8171-ac5a7e62c675 --

"He was born in 1828, but gave conflicting information as to whether he was born in Darke County, Ohio, or Lafayette, Noble County, Indiana. Family legend says that his father died by drowning when Allen was a young boy around eight years of age. The father's name has never been handed down.

Allen's mother was probably born Mary (Polly) Puderbaugh. She is known to have married a second and probably a third time, once to Benedict Singer (whom she divorced), and again to a party with the last name Crumine. We lose track of her after the mid 1850's. She had two other children with Benedict Singer, Benjamin Franklin and Francis Marion Singer(how patriotic!), with whom Allen was evidently close enough to move into new territories with before they became disconnected.

Allen was united with the German Baptist Brethren (Dunkard) Church in 1850. He was called to the ministry about 1866. He helped to organize several congregations in Kansas, including Burr Oak, where he received and distributed relief supplies during the severe grasshopper infestation of 1874. He was the first Brethren minister to preach in the Washington Territory, where he helped to organize the first Brethren congregation, at Klickitat Valley in 1880."

Personal Communication, Kerry Serl, 1 July 2017 --

"Hi David,

Thanks for all the work. I haven't had time to work on my own genealogy because I loaned my genealogy skills to a local history project and was then asked to co-write a book! The subject is George Washington, African American founder of Centralia, Washington. I found a 1890 newspaper article that said, "George Washington's life would make a long and interesting book." There is one aside mention of an Ives in the tale.

The longest write up on George Washington is in Centralia: First Fifty Years. That book is amazing in that an English teacher upon realzing there was not any history written on the town's founders and realizing many of her students were descendants of the founders had her kids go off and interview pioneers and descendants. They conducted interviews, copied old photos, and went through journals for four or more years. Anyway I digress (I just wish all towns had done that!).

Our George was mostly beloved for his kindness and generosity and nurturing of his town, but some still hated him for the color of his skin. He was poisoned in probably 1904. The story mentions that George was given some wine from his friend Mr. Ives. He had already drunk some on previous evenings and then he had some after it was laced with carbolic acid. His son went for help and luckily the person who came and stayed with him for four days was the oldest pioneer in Centralia when someone came to interview him in 1972.

The only Mr. Ives I find in the 1900 census is Allen Ives. I have written to you before about him because there is a road named after him on Ford's Prairie in Centralia. I didn't find your reply though I had thought you did. Do you know anything more about Allen Ives?

Information supplied by Candi Ives on Genealogy.com. She gives date of birth as 15 Feb 1828. She states that his father was born in Vermont (Mr. Ives). His mother, name unknown, born in Ohio. 1860 census shows Allen was born in Ohio. 1880 census shows he was born in Indiana. 1880 census confirms place of birth for his parents. 1850 census in Miami Co., Ohio also shows he was born in Ohio, age 23. 1880 census uses age 52, which would put him born in 1828.

>From Goldendale Wa--Klickitat history--Elder David Brower (Klickitat Valley Church) Wed. 8/4/1880--Met Brother David Ives and wife (David is son of Allen) 1/18/1881 Allen Ives asssisted Bro Brower in establishing church. Among charter members were David Ives and Mrs David Ives, Allen Ives and Mary K Ives, Jacob C Shermer and Joanna (Ives) Shermer. Allen Ives moved to Portland Or 1883 and to Centralia Wa 1889. History of Portland Church 5/26/1883--council meeting Elder Allen Ives was of "officials at this meeting."

Burr Oaks' history --"Dunkards or German Baptists, were organized in Oct 1870 by Rev Allen Ives. Same source has Allen Ives and Jacob Shermer moving to Portland Oregon by 1883 and to Centralia Washington by 1889.

IGI shows dob 15 Feb 1825 at Lafayette,Tippecanoe,Indiana.

The oldest record I have is the 1850 census from Miami Co., Ohio. I do not know the basis for the IGI record. Based on oldest known evidence, Ohio seems likely to be his state of birth.

Dates and places of birth and death for children are primarily from Candi Ives research.

Through correspondence of [Alice S. Christlieb], Elder Allen Ives of Burr Oak, Kansas, with his wife located here in 1896 and for the next few years did much of the preaching.After Bro. Carl left the field, Bro. Ives, though 70 years old walked 6 miles to Grand Mound and kept up the appointments at that place in connection with his other work.This was heavy work for the old brother, who at that time supported himself by day labor and and nursed and cared for a sick wife.Through it all his zeal never abated. This from the Centralia Congregation history (1909).

Additional information for Oren Ives:
From: http://genforum.genealogy.com/ives/messages/1553.html --
"Oren Ives. He enlisted 9/21/1861 at Davenport, Iowa, beginning one of the war's more unorthodox military careers. He was mustered in on the day of his enlistment as a private in Co. B, 8th Iowa Infantry. Four days later the regiment left for St. Louis. After a few months in Missouri they moved with the army to Tennessee. On 4/6/1862 they were encamped with the rest of Grant´s army at Pittsburgh Landing, on the Tennessee River. That Sunday morning, a Confederate army launched an all-out attack, catching Grant´s men by surprise. Over the next two days, on the fields around tiny Shiloh Church, more men would die than had died in all of America´s previous wars combined. At Shiloh, the 8th Iowa was one of several regiments in line along a sunken road in the Union center. The position held against repeated attacks, and Confederate soldiers nicknamed it the ``Hornet´s Nest.´´ The Hornets´ Nest held for several hours, but eventually exhaustion, ammunition shortages, and sheer numbers overwhelmed the defenders. The 8th Iowa found itself cut off and surrounded and the regiment, including Private Ives, surrendered. They were paroled and sent to Benton Barracks, MO, to await exchange. Private Ives apparently saw no point in waiting, and deserted sometime in August 1862, while at Benton Barracks. Eight months later, on 3/5/1863, he enlisted again, this time at Falls City, Nebraska Territory. He was mustered in 3/23/1863 as a private in Co. L, 2nd Nebraska Cavalry, for 9 months of service. His new regiment was at that time assigned to frontier duty at Fort Kearney, Nebraska Territory. Within a month they were ordered to Sioux City, IA, and from there they joined Sully's expedition against the Sioux in Dakota Territory. When they marched against the Sioux, however, Private Ives was not with them. He deserted from the regiment 7/26/1863 near Crow Creek Agency, Dakota Territory. Only a month later he enlisted yet again, this time as a private in Co H, 14th Kansas Cavalry. His three-year enlistment is dated White Cloud, Kansas, 8/26/1863. At the time of his enlistment, the regiment was engaged in operations against Quantrell's guerillas in Kansas, and a detachment had recently marched to the relief of Lawrence, KS after the massacre there on 8/21/1863. The regiment soon moved south into the Indian Territory (present day Oklahoma), operating in the vicinity of Fort Gibson, in the Cherokee Nation, and Fort Smith, Arkansas, for the remainder of the war. The regiment was unusual in that it had an organic artillery detachment, and Private Ives was assigned to duty with the guns for several months beginning in May 1864. On 6/1/1864 he was detached for duty at Fort Scott, and in May of 1865 he was detached for duty at Fort Gibson. The entire regiment arrived at Fort Gibson shortly thereafter, and Private Ives mustered out with his regiment at Fort Gibson on 6/25/1865. A number of different spellings of his first name appear in various records. The most common spelling, and the way he spelled it when he signed his enlistment in the 2nd Nebraska Cavalry, is Oren. Other variations include Orin, Oran, Orrin, and Owen. According to his various enlistment papers, Oren Ives was born in Miami County, OH, probably about 1833. He applied for a pension in 1889, and was at that time living in Iowa. He was apparently married, and his widow, Martha, applied for a pension in 1898. (CSR, DC, IFPR)" does not. My grandmother told me the story of Oren being murdered on his way to Texas to find his daughter, who had been taken by the family who cared for her after her mother's death. When Oren remarried and was gathering up his children from the people who had been caring for them, the family moved away in the night. They only discovered her years later when my grandmother was looking through a neighbor's picture album and found Bessie's picture. On his way to find her, Oren was murdered and a wagon bed was turned over on his body. I believe I determined that it was 1893 or thereabouts as his name is listed in a city directory, I think for Des Moines. I have not located the copy of the listing but I know I have it and will continue to search my files.

Oren's marriages were as follows:

1. Lydia M. Lee, born in Ohio, died January, 1872 in Iowa. Oren and Lydia had three children, David William Ives, born Oct 11, 1865 in Topeka, Kansas, a daughter who was twin to David and died at near birth, and a son, John F.A. Ives, born Jan 1872 in Iowa. My grandmother always said that even though these brothers were half-brothers, they always considered then full brothers and were very close.

2. Sarah Catherine Bonebrake married Oren Ives May 9, 1872. She was a loving mother to Oren's sons.She and Oren had eight more children and she died August 18,1885. My grandmother was five years old and remembered climbing onto her mother's bed and wondering why her mother wouldn't talk to her.

3. Martha J. Perkins (Mattie) was a widow with two daughters. She and Oren had no children. She was not remembered by Oren's children as a loving stepmother. My grandmother was sent to the Soldiers Orphans Home."

Children of Oren[7] and Sarah Catherine (Bonebrake) Ives:

1679.i. MILLARD FILLMORE[8] IVES was born in Story on 1 February 1873, and he died in Story on 21 October 1919. He married Mary Ellen Scott in Story on 26 November 1908. She was the daughter of Richard and Mary (_____) Scott and she was born in Pennsylvania in 1885.[9477]

"Don't know how much this will help, but Mrs. Huldah A. Ives married George Smith in Wayne County in 1859.

In the 1860 census George Smith's wife is listed as H.A.. In 1870 she is listed as Ann. So it is a pretty safe bet that Huldah A. is Huldah Ann.

That means that George Smith is the stepfather of Byron and Charles Ives. The Older Smith children are by Georges first marriage and any children born after are the children of George and Huldah.

Huldah was born in Canada. You might try looking there."

DEATH OF C.J. IVES AT WOODSTOCK, VT.

Cedar Rapids Daily Republican

19 Jul 1906

HAD BEEN IN POOR HEALTH FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS
REMAINS WILL BE BROUGHT TO CEDAR RAPIDS
He Filled Many Positions of Trust With the B.C.R. & N. and in 1884 Was Elected President of the Road

There was genuine sorrow throughout Cedar Rapids yesterday when it became known that C.J. Ives died Wednesday morning at Woodstock, Vt., the old home of Mrs. Ives. Mr. Ives was for many years an official of the old B.,C.R. & N. railway in this city and he had the high regard and effection of every employee of that system to a remarkable degree.

Mr. Ives had been in poor health for some time and has been seriously ill for ten days with a recurrence of an old heart trouble. This was probably aggravated by the recent death of Mrs. Ives' mother. A telegram announcing that death sent by Mr. Ives to this paper was one of the last messages to friends in Cedar Rapids.

For some time before Mr. Ives' death he was unconscious. His end was painless. After a long, useful honored life, with the tenderest good-will of all who had known him, he passed into sleep.

Mr. Ives' life work was another shining example of what may be accomplished by young men with talent and determination. He was a farmer's boy. Born in Rutland county, Vermont, Oct. 4, 1831, his early life was that of a typical New England farmer's son. He received the education of the country school and his boyhood was spent on a farm in Lee county and continued 1847 when he came to Iowa. He settled on a farm in Lee county and continued at farm work until Oct. 1, 1862. Then, at the age of 31, he entered the railway service. He began at the foot of the ladder. At first he was clerk for the Burlington and Missouri River road at Mt.
Pleasant. Then he went to Ottumwa in a similar capacity and Jan 15. 1864 he went to Burlington where he was clerk in the [unitelligible] freight office until 1867. Then he was transferred to the general freight office of the road at Burlington and was clerk there until July, 1870, when he came to Cedar Rapids. From 1871 to 1874 he was general passenger and ticket agent. From Oct. 15, 1874 to Oct. 28, 1875, he was general freight, passenger and ticket agent. From October 28 to Nov. 28, 1879, he was acting superintendent and general freight, passenger and ticket agent. From Nov. 28, 1879, to June 11, 1881, he was general superintendent and at the latter date he was elected president and general superintendent, which position he held until the road was merged with the Rock Island, June 5, 1902. Since that date Mr. Ives has been passing the sunset years of his life restfully. He was a stockholder in the Merchants National Bank of this city and was interested in real estate in the city and the county.

Mr. Ives was married Feb. 21, 1854 to Miss Ellen M. Dale of Wallingford, Vt. They had two children, C.D. Ives, deceased, and Hattie J., now Mrs. William ___ Douglas, of Paris, France. Mrs. Ives died April 16, 1885. In 1897 Mr. Ives married Mrs. Elizabeth Woodward, of Woodstock, Vt., who survives him. The body will probably arrive in Cedar Rapids Saturday morning, in which case the funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at the Ives residence. Mr. Walter Douglas will be home this morning and will assist Mr. George Douglas in preparing for the funeral. A full announcement cannot yet be made. But the funeral service will be at the house and it is probable that it will be held Saturday afternoon.

CHARLES J. IVES of Cedar Rapids is an illustration of a class of citizens of Iowa, starting in boyhood with only an inheritance of intellect, energy and a laudable ambition to accomplish something worth living for, has attained a high position in one of the great industries of the age. He was born in Rutland County, Vermont, October 4, 1831. He had but a limited school education, working on his father's farm until grown when he went with the crowds of gold seekers to the mining region of Pike's Peak. Returning to Iowa he obtained a subordinate position in a local office of the Burlington Railroad Company. Obtaining a knowledge of the business, in 1871 he was appointed freight agent of the first division of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Minnesota Railway Company. From this position he gained more knowledge of the growing railroad system and business then in the process of rapid development and developed the qualities required by that great industry and arose rapidly and steadily from one position to another until he had mastered the exacting problems of successful management and attained the control of the complicated business, holding the positions of president and general superintendent of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Railway. When he first entered its service, the entire length of the road was forty miles. Largely owing to his executive management and enterprise the system now has lines over the State aggregating 1,500 miles in length.

9:44 a.m. EST, August 31, 2012|Dave Rasdal, The Gazette, Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Nearly 120 years after it was built, the stately red granite mausoleum railroad magnate Charles John "C.J," Ives had constructed for his late wife, Helen Dale, looks brand new.

The restoration process at Oak Hill Cemetery, which began in 2008 but accelerated last year after a wall nearly collapsed, culminated in an emotional dedication ceremony for more than a dozen family members earlier this month.

"So many places and so many buildings are demolished," says Windy Buhler who coordinated restoration. "Not only was it important to us to restore our family grave, but it was important to preserve the history."

The mausoleum, which resembles a small house at 12 feet wide and 18 feet deep, is made out of 500-pound blocks of granite. As the final resting place for 15 people, it has always looked solid and immovable. But it was last repaired in 1939 and Iowa's radically changing weather took its toll. The foundation had shifted, then the wall gave way.

That's when Windy, a writer and producer who lives in Venice Beach, Calif., went to work for the family. Even though she hadn't been in Iowa until this month's dedication, she contacted engineers, masonry companies, reconstruction firms. With a family history preceeds a Revolutionary War hero, living family members felt restoration was imperative.

Suffice to say that C.J. Ives was an early mover and shaker in Eastern Iowa. From humble beginnings in Vermont which his family left in 1847 to buy and work a farm in Lee County, he rose to prominence with the arrival of the railroad. He started as a Mount Pleasant clerk in 1862, became an acting superintendent in 1875, then president of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Railroad in 1884. He had that position until 1902 when it was absorbed by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad.

Ellen Dale died in 1895. She had helped poor, sick, depressed and lonely people in Cedar Rapids.

C.J., who died in 1906 and had become friends with many prominent Cedar Rapids men, was president of the city's first electric company and served on the St. Luke's Hospital board.

As Windy followed the family's wishes, she was overjoyed to make contact with Dennis A. Hill in Cedar Rapids, who offered to help. He located Janssen Waterproofing of Van Horne which passed all of Windy's tests with flying colors. While one company proposed using heavy machinery, which could have damaged the mausoleum, Janssen Waterproofing, which includes several family members, methodically removed each piece of granite with a crane, restored it and replaced it.

"The Janssens and Dennis did painstaking work on the building and the results show," says Windy, who would not disclose the cost. "Our family grave is beautifully restored and we feel it is an important architectural save for the history and community of Cedar Rapids."

In a fitting tribute at the dedication -- it referenced William Ives who arrived at the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1635 -- a bugler played "Taps." As the haunting notes filtered through the cemetery, Ives descendants knew this mausoleum could stand forever.

"The work they've done," Windy says, "that building isn't going anywhere. We're making plans to keep it up."

JOHN G. IVES, Secretary of the Board of Trade, has been a resident of Springfield since 1839. He was born in Oneida county, New York, in 1818; learned the jewler's and watch maker's trade in his native State, and worked at the bench there, and after coming to Springfield, until 1855. In that year he erected the Aetna mill and run it ten years. He sold it in 1865, and the two following years, 1866 and 1867, he filled the office of Treasurer of Sangamon county, being elected on the Republican ticket against a usual Democratic majority of several hundred. Since retiring from that office, Mr. Ives has been chiefly identified with the grain traffic. He was also twice elected to the Board of Supervisors. In 1843, he married Miss Abigal Watson, a native of Nashville, Tennessee. They have three sons and a daughter, the latter married and living in Denver, Colorado. One of the sons is there also, the other two reside in Springfield. Mr. Ives is a Master in the Masonic Order, was for many years an active member of I.O.O.F. and a number of years Treasurer of the Grand Lodge.

Died, in this city at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Lucy M. Williams, on Tuesday, March 29, 1898, at 9:30 a.m., of heart failure, after an illness of two weeks, John G. Ives, in the 81st year of his age. John G. Ives was born in Oswego, N. Y., on March 22, 1818. He served in apprenticeship in the jewelry business and came to Springfield in 1838 and opened a jewelry store, and some years later took in as a partner the late Gen. I. B. Curran, and the business was carried on under the firm name of Ives & Curran some twenty-five years and was well and favorably known all over the state of Illinois. After retiring from this business Mr. Ives was engaged for some years in the milling business and was operating the Aetna Flouring Mill in this city when it blew up and was not rebuilt. He was a republican in politics, and in his younger days took quite a lively interest in elections, but was not a seeker after office, but he was nominated by his party and elected county treasurer of Sangamon county in the year 1864. Mr. Ives has not been in active business for the past fifteen years, but has lived a quiet and retired life with his daughter, Mrs. Williams. He is survived by two children, Mrs. Lucy M. Williams, of this city, and Benjamin Ives, of Chicago. Funeral services will be held at the residence of his daughter, No. 1112 West High street, on Thursday, the 31st inst., at 2:30 p.m. Pub. in IL State Register, Springfield, IL, 3-30-1898

"The Coes are not descendants of Mr. Lincoln, but relatives were friends of Mr. Lincoln when he practiced law in Springfield, Ill., where he's buried. Mr. Coe said two of his great-great-grandfathers and one great-great-great-grandfather and their wives knew Mr. Lincoln.

William Weldon Watson was Mr. Coe's great-great-great-grandfather. He ran a confectionery store in Springfield and produced items favored by the Lincolns, especially macaroon pyramids.

Mr. Watson's daughter, Abigail Watson Ives, was a board member of the Springfield Soldiers Aid Society, formed to help Civil War soldiers during and after the war. Miss Keene purportedly donated a piece of her bloodstained dress to the society.

A letter handed down by Ben Coe's grandmother Lydia Williams Coe indicates that each woman in the society received a piece of the dress, including Abigail. The piece handed down to the Coe family was later cut up into pieces for a commemorative display quilt that was never made, family members say. The piece is about 41/2 inches by 41/2 inches.

"The Coe family was aware that the Springfield Presidential Museum had at least one piece of the dress swatch also purported to be from Laura Keene," said Mrs. Coe Foran, who is a social studies teacher in Nashua, N.H."

"14 June 1915 - Unveiling of Lincoln Marker by Springfield Chapter, Daughters of The American Revolution. -- The unveling of the Lincoln marker, which is in commemoration of the farewell address often martyred president to Springfield people was held Monday afternoon, June 14, 1915, at 3:00 o'clock. The exercices took place at the Wabash freight house, Tenth and Monroe streets. The American flags which veiled the tablet are of historic interest. One as made by hand by Mrs. John G. Ives, the starts painted by Mr. Ives being thirty-one in number, the last one California. It drapped the engine on the train from which Mr. Lincoln made his farewell speech and went to Washington. From there is was returned to the Lincoln collection, then to Mrs. Lucy Ives Williams, who presented it to Arthur Huntington. The second flag to be used belonged to Isaac Hawley, who was a great friend of Mr Lincoln and one of his pallbearers. Mr. Hawley is the grandfather of Miss Marian Brinkerhoff. The flag was used for the first time August 8, 1860, when the Lincoln campaign was opened."

From: IVES SOLDIERS of the AMERICAN CIVIL WAR By Kenneth M. Ives, Version 6.2, February 23, 2014

117.Henry B. Ives. He enlisted 5/16/1861 as a private, Independent Battery D, Pennsylvania Artillery (Durell's Battery). This battery was raised in 1861 in Bucks and Berks Counties, and was organized at Doylestown, PA 11/24/1861. They were originally equipped with 4, and later 6, 10-lb Parrot rifles. The battery was present at 1st Manassas, but was not engaged. They also fought at 2nd Manassas and South Mountain. At Antietam, they were engaged on the Union left, near the "Burnside Bridge." On 11/15/1862, near Sulphur Springs, VA, the battery fought a sharp artillery duel with Confederate guns.

The battery expended over 300 rounds in this engagement, but suffered only two casualties. One was Private Ives, whose arm was amputated after being shattered by a Confederate shell. Though his wound is documented in the OR (which refers to his unit as the "2nd Independent Battery"), no corresponding service record has been located. Sulphur Springs, where he was wounded, was on the Rappahanock River, south of Warrenton, VA. The springs had been a resort before the war, and the road past the springs was an important crossing point on the river. Private Ives was discharged 2/19/1863, as a result of his wound. He applied for a pension at the time of his discharge. (CWVC, IFPR, OR I.21, p5, SR-PA)

The Drowning of Butler Ives. - The Vallejo Recorder of December 28th gives the particulars of the death of Butler Ives, who was well known in this city:

On Tuesday Judge Riley received information that a dead body lay in the tules near the residence of Halliman, on the Central Pacific Railroad, or better known as the Four Mile House, about that distance from the city. By direction of the Coroner of Napa county, Judge Riley sent a man to procure the body and bring it to Vallejo. He was also directed to inter it should no marks of violence appear visible or anything lead to the supposition that it had been the victim of foul play. Accordingly a messenger was dispatched in the person of Edgar Welsh, who found the body several hundred yards below the bridge at that place, washed out upon the shore. The body was brought to town and found to be, by the papers and letters in his possession, Butler Ives, an assistant engineer in the field, attached to the staff of engineers of the Central Pacific Railroad. He appeared to be a man about thirty-five years of age, was well dressed on black cloth suit, with kid gloves, white shirt and jewelry, and bore a deep cut on the forehead. He had in his possession at the time surveying instruments, showing evidently that he was on duty. A letter from the Chief Engineer of the road at Sacramento, dated the 21st, says also that a lot of drawing paper had just been forwarded him, and it is supposed, since the damage to the railroad by the late rain, he had been sent out to look at the repairs, and in crossing the bridge perhaps stepped out of the car, as is probable, to see its condition, when he fell off the train. In falling his clothing was torn, and his gold chain that caught something, was separated near the pocket. Another letter, from Engineer S. S. Montague, of December 22d, orders him to report the material under his possession and control by January 1st. He probably met with his death on Christmas or the day before. In his pockets were found a number of small things, besides $16.50 in coin, and a check for $1,500 on the bank of California and an improved American silver watch. His diary shows him to have been in the country (read California) several years, but we were unable to ascertain whether he was a married man or not. A brother resides in Michigan, from whom he had a letter in his possession. No one in this city (Vallejo) appears to know him, although his face appears to many familiar.

Includes NotesNotes for Warren Ives:

These pictures of Warren and Maria were taken in Iowa City, probably around 1884 when they both would have been 51 years old. They had five children, two of whom lived to advanced ages -- Sarah to 100 and Milo to 95. The four older children were born in Connecticut. Burton was born after they had moved to Iowa. His early death is believed to have been due to his having rheumatic fever as a boy.

As previously indicated, Warren was only eight years old when his father (Leonard) died in 1831. Subsequently he went to live as a "bond boy" with Deacon Evelyn Blakeslee. The Blakeslee name is prominent in the history of North Haven Episcopal Church, so presumably Warren was brought up in that faith. According to the agreement, at 18 Warren was given a suit of clothes and $100. From the Deacon's farm he went to New Haven where he found a job in Rathbun's clothing store.

How they became acquainted we don't know, but on September 6, 1846, Baptist Maria Abigail Norton and Episcopalian Warren Ives were married by Samuel Warren Law, Minister of the Gospel in the Fairhaven Methodist Church. The 1847-48 New Haven city directory lists Warren and brother George as follows:

Warren Ives, Fish Market, Silver c Hill

George E. Ives, Livery stable, rear 9 Fleet Street

Warren and Maria's first child, Sarah Maria, was born November 2, 1847, but the rest of the family's arrival was delayed by the discovery of gold in California. The excitement which the news generated in the East is recorded in numerous historical accounts, and it's not hard to understand young Warren being caught up in the "feverish desire for the yellow metal" which swept the seaports of North America.

A popular way of reaching the California gold fields in 1849 was by sailing "around the Horn" with a group equipped to engage in mining operations once the 20,000 miles to San Francisco Harbour had been negotiated. With the financial backing of brother George, Warren joined such a partnership -- the Montague Mining and Trading Association. Captain G.H. Montague, principal owner of the 87 foot schooner of the same name was the organizer of the expedition. On the next page is a copy of the bond which Warren signed (and George cosigned) as a member of the 54 man partnership. Each member of the association was presumed to have some skill that would be of use to the organization. Family tradition has it that Warren signed on as a butcher, even though his experience in the trade was meager. He got by, though, with the help of some of his friends. Also on this trip, he was quite sick with the measles.

Records compiled by the Connecticut Historical Society on that state's numerous argonauts show that the G.H. Montague departed Belle Dock, port of New Haven at noon on January 23, 1849 and anchored in San Francisco Bay on June 27. It was the third ship from the States and the first of the organized mining companies to arrive from the East.

Despite the relatively good trip to California, the Montague Company was struck with great misfortune shortly after its arrival in the Yuba River gold fields. The trouble was severe illness, probably cholera contracted from other passengers being transported up the river. By December, 13 of their number had died and the association had agreed to disband.

An undated document shows that Warren forfeited his $500 bond, probably to escape from the risk of contracting the illness that had so shattered the company's gold mining hopes.

Another document, the San Francisco Directory of business firms for 1852-53 and 1854 lists Warren as a fish merchant in stalls no. 26 and 28 in the Pacific Market -- on Commercial between Leidsdorfd and Sansome Streets. Apparently he found this business to be more profitable than looking for gold.

Warren is said to have made one trip home during his six years as a 49er. The story of this trip home as recorded by James (Jim) Ives and probably related to him by his grandmother, Hedwig (Hattie Brinkman) Ives says that Warren went on ship from San Francisco to Panama. Here he got off the ship and took a shortcut across the isthmus riding on a donkey. His pants were torn to shreds from rubbing against the brush and he didn't have a change of clothes because they were in his trunk going around the horn on his ship. He then got on a different ship and went to either New York or New Haven. Someone saw him getting off the ship ragged and dirty and passed the word that Warren Ives had come back from the gold rush "stony broke". The rumor reached his family before he did as he stopped first to clean up, buy a new suit, and buy a doll for Sarah. Thus they were surprised when he arrived home looking quite dapper and well to do. How he traveled, we don't know, but when he returned to California in 1855, he again crossed the Isthmus of Panama. Lee Clearman has the leather vest which he wore with his fortune sewed in it.

Back in Connecticut, Warren took up where he'd left off in the New Haven fish business, and the business of raising a family. As shown on the outline, Leon was born in 1856, Morris in 1857, and Milo in 1859. Benham's New Haven Directory for 1861-62 carried a full page ad showing Warren in partnership with his long-time Silver Street neighbor, William Fuller. The indications that Warren operated a farm in nearby Orange township prior to moving to Iowa have not been confirmed, although he does not show up in the New Haven directory after 1862.

In 1862 he decided to go west again -- this time with his family and only as far as Iowa. The exact dates are not clear, but it appears that they stayed with Warren's sister and brother-in-law, John and Lydia Pearson at Joliet, Illinois during the winter of 1862-63. Although the details may vary a little from other accounts, Milo's recollections on the following pages give a good picture of their early days in Iowa.

Records in the Connecticut State Library show that Maria Abigail's parents, Zachariah and Nabby (Dickinson) Norton were married in Rocky Hill on May 7, 1812. Zachariah's parents, Isaiah and Abigail (Hart) Norton, were married March 27, 1879 in Washington, Connecticut. Aunt Sarah Clearman passed along the information about Zachariah and Nabby's children as documented below.

1). Jalon. He went to Virginia, married a southern girl and after the Civil War was never heard from again.

2). Delia. She married Samuel Geer. They had 3 children.

3).Russell. He married Eliza Beecher. She was a relative of Henry Ward Beecher and she never let the Norton family forget it. They had no children.

4).Hart. He married first Emily, and second Sophia. He had four children.

5).Maria. She married Warren Ives: They had five children.

6).Lavinia. She married Clark Van Deusen: they had three children and a grandson who preached in Rolfe, IA.

7).Hulda. She married Robert Alling: they had two sons. A grandaughter, Edna Alling, lived in Elim Park, Connecticut.

8).Maurice. He married Margaret Love: they had two children.

It is interesting to note that while Warren is praised generously in his obituary, no mention is made of his church affiliations. Family tradition has it that he got his fill of "church goin" while he was growing up in the household of Deacon Evelyn Blakeslee.

Maria was raised a Baptist, and according to her obituary, she was a charter member of the Oxford Baptist Church as long as it was in existence. Subsequently she became a member of the Presbyterian Church in Oxford when it was formed.

The story also is told that the Presbyterian minister stopped at the Ives farm one Sunday morning while on his way to another parish. Finding the Ives boys in the yard, he invited (or challenged) them to be in church the next Sunday...and they were. By all accounts they all became staunch Presbyterians for the rest of their lives.

Warren was a Democrat. When he was in his late 70's, George Clearman took him to hear William Jennings Bryan at a Chautauqua program in Iowa City. George managed to get Warren to meet the great political orator. The interview fell flat, however, when Warren told Bryan that he had voted for him four times, but was glad he hadn't been elected.

There were not Social Security or hospitalization programs in those times, and the old folks expected to live out their lives in the homes they had established, being taken care of by which ever one of the children remained at home. Maria passed away on April 13, 1904, a little past 80 years of age. Unfortunately she never got to enjoy the new house which was completed the same year with a bedroom on the first floor. This then was Warren's room for the next 15 years. He passed away there on October 23, 1919 at the age of 96 years, six months, and 15 days. A local newspaper carried this interview with him on the occassion of his 90th birthday:

BEST DIGGINS ON IOWA FARMS

So Declare Warren Ives as he looks back over 90 years of his Life

Oxford, April 8--Special: Ninety years of age, the last fifty of which he has spent on his present farm in the record of Warren Ives, one of the pioneers of Oxford Township.

Mr Ives was born near New Haven, Conn., April 8, 1823 and moved to his present home in April, 1863. He has reached the four score and ten in full physical and mental vigor.

Mr Ives has had an eventful life. He spent his early years as a farmer and a merchant in Connecticut. In 1849 he went to California in search of gold, spending six years there. His favorite remark, as he looks over his fine farm is, "Well, I travelled thousands of miles in search of gold, but I have found the best diggins here in the soil of my Iowa farm."

As already noted, the children of Warren and Maria Abigail (Norton) Ives were Sarah Maria, Leon Warren, Morris Norton, Milo Russell, and Burton Willis. Burton died as a young man, but the other four children grew to adulthood on the homestead south of Wxford.

The following is from the FUNERAL NOTICE of Warren Ives:
Dies At Ninety-Six Years:

Warren Ives, one of the pioneers of Johnson county, Iowa, passed away at his home near Oxford, Thursday evening, October 23, at the age of ninety-six years, six months, and fifteen days. The end came peacefully, after an illness of but a few days, and was due to the infirmities of old age.

Mr. Ives was born at North Haven, Conn., April 8, 1823. He was united in marriage to Maria A. Norton Sept. 6, 1846. To this union were born five children. Four of these survive him: Mrs. Sarah Clearman of Iowa City; Leon and Morris of Rolfe, and Milo, who lives on the old homestead. One son, Burton, passed away June 16, 1882, and the wife died April 13, 1904. He also leaves twenty grandchildren and nineteen great-grandchildren.

Mr. Ives was born a poor boy, and had few educational advantages. After many struggles he saved enough money to establish himself as a merchant in New Haven where he remained until 1849. In that year he went to California in quest of gold. His company chartered a sailing vessel, and were six months making the trip around Cape Horn. Their vessel was the first of the gold hunters to enter the Golden Gate. He remained in California six years, making one trip home in the mean time to visit his family.

Returning home, he again entered business in New Haven, remaining until 1863, when he, with his family removed to the present home, where he has lived continuously for fifty-six years. Here he saw many of the hardships of the early days when the tallow dip was the principal means of lighting and most of the labor saving machinery of today was unthot of. By hard labor and perseverance, he developed a beautiful farm from the natural prairie. Here he was content to live, delighting in the growing crops and well-kept fields until the Heavenly Father called him to the home above.

Mr. Ives was a good representative of that strong New England type that has done so much to mold the history of our country. He had a remarkably strong intellect and a wonderful memory. His liberal education was gained entirely from his wide reading. Always taking a keen interest in public affairs, he was a good judge of men and events. He was a capital storyteller, and old and young listened with delight to his conversation.

He was devoted to his family and was never happier than when surrounded by his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, who will always remember his kindly interest in their affairs. He was always content with his lot, never complaining, and those nearest to him have nothing but pleasant memories to cherish. Altho he lived far beyond the alotted time, his spirit ever remained young. He has left a vacant place that will be hard to fill.
