Additional information for Edward Riley Ives:

From: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Edward_Ives --

"Edward Riley Ives (September 13, 1839 - 1918) was an American toymaker from Connecticut. He married Jennie Blakeslee in 1866, and with the help of his father in law and brother in law, he founded the Ives Manufacturing Company two years later in 1868 in Plymouth, Connecticut. It became one of the largest toy companies in the United States during the 19th century and the early decades of the 20th century. Late in his career, he turned the company over to his son, Harry Ives.

Edward Ives was a distant cousin of U.S. classical music composer Charles Edward Ives. Ives and his son were the subject of a biography titled Messrs. Ives of Bridgeport, written by Louis Hertz and published in 1950."

JAMES W. IVES, a miller and at one time merchant of the village of Java, N.Y., was born at Strykersville in 1837. Dr. James IVES, the father of James W., was born in Vermont in 1810, from which State his father moved about the year 1820 to Aurora, Erie County, N.Y., where he was a prominent business man. The grandparents, James and Lucy (BREWER) IVES, reared three sons and as many daughters, who all grew to maturity, and became heads of families in turn. Neither the grandfather nor the grandmother lived to be old, the former dying in the vigor of manhood in 1828, and the latter following in 1830. Dr. IVES married Miss Mary Metcalf WOODS. This lady was left an orphan in her early childhood; and was adopted by the Rev. Whitman METCALF, by whom she was educated in Massachusetts. She became a teacher afterward, as her husband was also, so that Mr. James W. IVES may lay claim to a double heredity of intelligence. Dr. IVES died in 1879, and his widow in 1884. They left three children â€“ James W. IVES, of this biography, and two daughters â€“ Amelia, now Mrs. A. PEASE, of Strykersville; and Loraine, the wife of Mr. E. FOX, of North Java.

James W. IVES received his education in the old Middlebury Academy and at the University of Rochester, and taught school for a year after finishing his collegiate course. His natural tastes inclined him to the freedom and independence of country life, so he became a farmer and miller, which double vocation he ahs followed for thirty years. In 1861 and 1863 he was drafted for army service, but failed to pass the medical examination to which all recruits were subjected. In 1861 he was married to Miss Helen RICHARDSON, a daughter of Mr. Charles RICHARDSON, of Strykersville. In 1871 he was left a widower with three children â€“ Glenna, who married Mr. Charles LEWIS, of Rochester, and is the mother of one son; Charles IVES, as yet unmarried, and living in Rochester; and Winifred, whose life lasted only sixteen years. Two years after the death of his first wife Mr. IVES was married to her niece, Miss Frances RICHARDSON. Five children were born of this union, all but one of whom died in infancy; and the father was a second time bereaved of his eldest daughter, Mary, whose brief course of fifteen years was the pathetic repetition of the story of a short life, her death on June 20, 1892, recalling the similar bereavement of his first marriage.

Mr. .IVESâ€™s popularity in the county has been manifested by the large majority of votes he has received when he has been candidate for office. In 1874 and 1875 he held the office of Supervisor, and is now serving a fourth term as County Superintendent of the Poor. His majority at the election of 1894 was twenty-four hundred, one of the largest ever carried in the county. He is now a member of the Baptist church of Java, formerly of the Baptist church of Strykersville, and was clerk of it for twenty years. He is also serving as Secretary and Treasurer of the State Convention of County Superintendents of the Poor, to which office he has been unanimously elected for five successive years.

He was a Superintendent of the Poor for many years.

He was a town Supervisor of Jave, NY from 1874-1875

REV. BENONI I. IVES, D.D. True religion consists not in a nice orthodoxy, but in a sincere love of truth and in a hearty approbation of and compliance with doctrines fundamentally good; not in vain flourishes of outward performance, but in an inward good complexion of mind; not in a furious zeal for trivial circumstances, but in a conscionable practising the substantial parts of religion. Such has ever been the purpose and life-work of the subject of the present sketch, the Rev. Benoni I. Ives, D.D., of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Dr. Ives is of New England ancestry, his grandfather, Josiah Ives, who was from Wyoming, Pa., having come to this State from Vermont. Dr. Ives's father," Orin Ives, a farmer by occupation, served through the War of 1812 under General Scott, being present at the battle of Lundy's Lane and many other important engagements. While still a young man, he came to Tompkins County, New York, and was there united in marriage to Miss Mary Gibbs, a native of New Jersey. Their son, Benoni I., was born in Lansing, Tompkins County, January 2, 1822. His father afterward removed to Stockbridge, Ingham County, Mich. The lad received his early education at the common school of Lansing, N.Y., and while quite young went to Michigan for three years, returning to this State on account of the superior educational advantages it afforded, attending the Macedon Academy in Wayne County. When twenty years of age, he experienced religion, being converted at Belvidere, N.J., and, feeling that he was called to the work of the ministry, immediately entered upon a course of preparation for the same, being admitted on probation at the Conference at Utica in 1845.

After two years Mr. Ives was ordained Deacon, being advanced to Eldership at the expiration of four years. His first charges were at Fleming and Stockbridge, at the latter place having a wonderful revival, receiving two hundred persons into the church, four of whom afterward became ministers, one being the noted Rev. Dr. Warren, editor of the Advocate at Syracuse. His next charge was at Utica; and during his pastorship there he organized a new society, and built the New South Street Church. Coming to Auburn in 1854, he was made pastor of the First Church, which was his first residence in this city. During his pastorate in Auburn, he organized what is now the Wall Street Church, of which he was pastor for three years. In December, 1856, he was appointed Chaplain to the Prison, retaining that position for some eleven years, for three years of the time also serving the Wall Street Church. In 1868 he was appointed Presiding Elder of the Auburn District for four years. At that time the district had thirty-two charges, Dr. Ives holding quarterly meetings. He also held nine camp-meeetings in the district, which were blessed with great success.

At the close of his Presiding Eldership of this district, and at the request of the Board of Bishops of the Conference, he took such a relation to the Conference as allowed him to devote his time to the dedication of churches, of which kind of work he had already done a great deal during his ministerial life. In the prosecution of this work, during the first eight years he travelled an average of twenty-four thousand miles a year in railroad cars, dedicating full one hundred churches a year in Canada and the States. In this vast territory he has dedicated in the neighborhood of two thousand and fifty churches, and been instrumental in raising millions of money to meet the expenses of their erection. In very many cases he has gone outside his own denomination, working with the Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and Baptists, assisting the Rev. Dr. Talmage in dedicating the three Tabernacles that were destroyed by fire. On three occasions he has had charge of the State and International Camp Meetings at Round Lake. For two years he was agent of the Syracuse University, and has been one of the Charter Trustees since its organization, taking an active and successful part in the raising of funds for the University. He was Presiding Elder of the Syracuse District for four years, which is one of the most important districts, and was also Presiding Elder of the Geneva District for six years, which occupied him until 1892. He is at the present time Secretary of the Conference Endowment Fund, and is still actively engaged in the dedication of churches.

The Rev. Mr. Ives received his degree of D.D. from the Illinois Wesleyan University in 1873. He is undoubtedly one of the most powerful and magnetic speakers the Methodist Episcopal church has ever had, and is held in the highest estimation by the members of that and other bodies. He has always been earnestly interested in the temperance cause, being at one time head of the Sons of Temperance in the State of New York, and has given temperance a most prominent part all through his public life. He was largely influential in bringing about lay representation in the Methodist Episcopal church, and was four times a delegate to the General Conference, the highest body in the church. Dr. Ives has also played an active part in the political world, being one of the delegates to form the Republican party in his State, and one of the committee to form its platform at the Convention at Syracuse in the summer of 1855. He had most intimate relations with all the strong Republican leaders of that time from one end of the land to the other, as for ten years, from 1856 to 1866, he went over the State many times from Buffalo to New York City, delivering political speeches, Horace Greeley saying of him that "he was the ablest platform speaker of the Republican party." He was also engaged in the Lincoln and Grant Presidential campaigns.

Dr. Ives has been twice married. By his first wife he had one son, Frank B., now a prominent business man in this city. By his second marriage, with Miss Julia Hosmer, daughter of William Hosmer, the noted abolitionist editor, he has two children: William Hosmer Ives, a graduate of Syracuse University, and now teaching in the Stevens Institute, Hoboken, a graduate of May, 1894, in the law department of the University of New York City; and Julia Belle Ives a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College and also of the Syracuse University.

Dr. Ives has made his residence at No. 111 South Street, Auburn, for thirty years; and it may be confidently stated that no man is more respected by his fellow-citizens. He early found that he had a mission to perform in this world for which his talents precisely fitted him, and, having found out what that mission was, has thrown into it all the energies of his soul, seeking its accomplishment, not his own glory."

The most significant and most easily mined anthracite coal fields in the world are located in Luzerne County, part of Northeastern Pennsylvania. Hundreds of thousands of immigrants came from thousands of miles away, primarily from small villages spread across Ireland, Wales, Scotland, and England, hoping to make a living because of the promise that coal mining offered. From about 1850 on, with the arrival of significant numbers of women, the Wyoming Valley quickly attracted the attention of factory owners in New York and Philadelphia. The newly arriving immigrant women needed jobs, and thus dozens of factories throughout the region were established to take advantage of an ever-increasing pool of available labor. These women worked in silk, cotton, and woolen mills. They sewed garments and manufactured cigars. They contributed significantly to the growth of the economy; they kept their families together during hard times in the mines, and during times of labor unrest. Fifteen million immigrants from Europe entered the United States from 1870 to 1915 to get jobs. As many as one hundred thousand ended up in the coal fields of Luzerne County. Ann was probably a child of one of those families who grew into womanhood to finally marry Edward E. Ives. Their marriage occurred prior to or around 1852. She was born in England or Wales in 1834, and it was noted in census that her Mother and Father were both of foreign birth. The couples children were Charles, Clarinda, Edward Jr., Alma, M. A. (female child), Eliza, William (Willie), Emily, Ellen, Henry and George. In the 1900 U.S. Census, Eward is shown to be 71 years of age, married 40 years to Anne Ives, who was not listed in 1900, therefore it is possible she became deceased between the 1880 and 1900 U.S. Census. The couple owned their home in Moosic, Lackawanna County, PA. Ann was one of many immagrants from Wales who came with her family because of the abundance of anthracite coal.

Aunt Sarah, as she was called by her many nieces, nephews, and friends, was born November 2, 1847, in New Haven, Conn. She was 16 years old when the family moved to Iowa in 1863. Without doubt she was of great help to her parents in establishing their new home in this still rather wild country. One can imagine that as a young girl she learned that there was much truth to the saying, "Women's work is never done."

On October 6, 1869, shortly before her 22nd birthday, she married a neighbor boy, Albert Rollin CLearman. He was a Civil War veteran. The couple began their married life on the place 1/2 mile west of the Ives farm on the south side of the road, later farmed by Rollin Clearman and later still by Dewey Swanson.

Albert died on September 14, 1880, only 11 years after their marriage, leaving Sarah with a family of three little ones to raise, and a farm to be farmed, both of which she did with vigor and loving care. She spent part of her later years with her daughter, Hattie Cameron, in Iowa City, but her death occurred at the same farm where she and Albert had begun farming 78 years earlier.

Until she passed away of pneumonia on March 17, 1946, at the age of 99, she was the oldest living member of the Oxford Presbyterian Church. She also was a member more years than any other living person.

The children of Sarah and Albert Clearman are George, Harriet (Hattie), and Rollin.

Includes NotesNotes for Leon Warren Ives:
[ives.ftw]

L.W. Ives was born at New Haven, Connecticut on February 1, 1856. He was seven years old when his parents moved to Iowa in 1863. He grew to manhood in the Oxford community and attended the country school near Tiffin. On January 12, 1882 (age 26) he was united in marriage to Louisa Ditto. She was 19. Her family lived on a farm a few miles south of the Ives farm, in Hardin Township. Unfortunately, the record of their early married life together is now dim, but presumably they made their first home on a farm in the area.

In 1886 the family, which included two children by then, moved to Pocahontas County, no doubt with the encouragement of brother Morris who had settled there a year earlier. In 1890 they purchased the farm south of Rolfe, which has been in the family ever since. In recent years it has been owned and operated by grandson Norton Ives.

According to his obituary, Leon Ives was a man of large mind and kind heart, interested in the home, the community, and the church. He served his township in various capacities, including the office of Justice of the Peace. At the time of his passing he was on the Board of Trustees and a Sunday School officer for the Rolfe Presbyterian Church. He also had the distinction of owning one of the first Model-T Fords --- brass radiator, gas lights, and all --- in the Rolfe area.

His death on January 6, 1923 was from cancer and complications after an illness extending over several months. He was 67 years old.

Louisa M.S. Ditto, daughter of Andrew and Minnie Ditto, was born in Clayton County, Iowa on September 26, 1863. She was the second of seven children in this family. The census of 1880 records that both parents were born in Germany.

Aunt Louisa, as she was affectionately known by her many friends and relatives, outlived Leon by 28 years, during which time she ministerd to the needs of her family and relatives in both the Rolfe and Oxford communities. She passed away in her home at Rolfe on November 22, 1951 at the age of 88 years, two months, and four days.

The children of Leon and Lousia Ives are Andrew W., Minnie Maria, Gertrude Louise, and Daphne LaRose.

"Morris Norton Ives (son of Warren Ives and Maria Abigail Norton)973 was born August 11, 1857 in Orangetown, CN (Near New Haven)973, and died February 24, 1939973. He married Hedwig Anna Maria Brinkman on April 6, 1891973.

"M.N. Ives, resident of this vicinity for over half a century, passed away at his farm home Friday morning (February 24, 1939) following a long illness due to advanced age," according to his obituary published in the Rolfe Arrow. He was born in Orangetown, Conn. (near New Haven) on August 11, 1857. He would have been 82 years old at the time of his death.

Morris was six years old when his parents moved to Iowa. He grew up in the Oxford community, going to country school and doing his share to help develop his parent's farm. However, the pioneering spirit was too strong for him to settle there, and in 1883, at the age of 26, he came to Calhoun County where he acquired a threshing machine, which he operated for two seasons.

In 1883, he moved on to Pocahontas County where he is said to have traded the threshing rig for 160 acres of prairie land south of Rolfe. Two other pioneers to this area were Diederich and Anna Brinkman with their one-year old daughter, Hedwig Anna Maria (Hattie for short). They settled on the slightly higher ground half a mile west of Morris' farm.

As a girl, Hattie spent a lot of time herding cattle on the open prairie in the area. It is not hard to imagine her meeting her neighbor, Morris, in the course of her duties. And it is even less surprising that they would be married - on April 6, 1891 - when she was a young girl of 19 and he a handsome eligible bachelor of 34. Family tradition has it that they eloped. The story of their elopement was related to Eunice (Glackin) Ives as follows:

Friends and neighbors had stopped to chat in the church yard after Sunday services. While others congregated in groups, Morris invited Hattie to sit with him in his buggy and she happily accepted. When Hattie's father noticed this occurrence, he quickly made his way to the buggy and ordered Hattie to get out. The spirited Hattie refused and the two dashed away in the buggy, subsequently deciding to marry as soon as possible. They couldn't marry that day as it was Sunday so Morris took Hattie to Aunt Louise's (married to Leon) where she spent the night. Early the next morning they went to Pocahontas to get married. Nevertheless, the Diederich Brinkman family and the Morris Ives family lived as good neighbors for many subsequent years, each contributing abundantly to the growth and development of the community. In fact, Hattie related with a smile that her parents accepted the marriage graciously and were the young couple's first visitors.

Interesting note: Morris Ives and his nephew, Andrew Ives, married sisters: Hedwig and Dora Brinkman.

During their active years, Hattie and Morris were prominent in the activities of the Pocahontas County Farm Bureau and the Rolfe Presbyterian Church. Morris served for a time as assessor in Garfield Township. He was a familiar sight behind his bays, coon skin coat open to the winter winds, as he travelled from farm to farm to "take their record."

The depression after World War I struck savagely at Morris' lifetime ambition to give a farm to each of his children, and the financial losses contributed to his declining health. In the tradition mentioned earlier, the youngest, Arlo, stayed on the home place to make a home for the old folks.

In 1949, Aunt Hattie, as she was widely known, moved into a small house in Rolfe where she is remembered by neighbors as an untiring worker in her yard and flower garden. In 1962, she was honored by the Greater Rolfe Club as "Cow Girl Queen." And again at the Rolfe Centennial celebration in 1963 she was honored as the oldest pioneer resident of the community. She died on December 28, 1964 at the age of 92 years, eight months and three days. Fortunately, grandson James Ives has captured on tape some of her recollections of the days when she was growing up on the prairie south of Rolfe.

The descendants of Morris and Hattie are numerous.

"Oxford - Milo R. Ives, 94, who lived on the same farm three miles southeast of here for 91 years, died at 4 p.m. Saturday (June 26, 1964) at Mercy Hospital in Iowa City following an illness of several weeks," according to the Oxford Leader of July 1, 1964.

Milo was born October 23, 1859, in New Haven, Conn., the third son of Warren and Maria Ives. He was three years old when his family moved to the Oxford area in 1863. Along with his older brothers, he attended the country school several miles east of the home farm southeast of Oxford.

On December 18, 1884, he and Etta Watson were married. He was 25 and she was 19 years old. By then Milo's two older brothers had moved to northwest Iowa, and his younger brother, Burton, had died. Obviously, Milo was elected to be the one who would stay at home to farm with his father and take care of his parents in their declining years. This may have been hard to do, considering the pioneering flavor of the times. For instance, a file of old letters to Milo from his cousin, Thomas Clearman, gave glowing accounts of his frontier experiences out in Kansas.

Perhaps as an investment, but possibly also to satisfy a need to share in his brother's adventures, Milo purchased 200 acres of undrained and unfenced land adjacent to Morris' farm in Pocahontas County. This is the place, three miles south of Rolfe that Bob and Maude moved to in 1913, representing in effect the final pioneering of northwest Iowa.

Henrietta Louise Watson, daughter of Lewis and Louisa Watson, was born in Tarrytown, New York, October 12, 1865, in the vicinity of Washington Irving's Sleepy Hollow. Lewis Watson emigrated to the United States in 1849 at the age of 14. Although he was born in Ireland, he claimed to be of English and Scotch ancestry. Having learned carriage-making in New York, he continued his trade as a carpenter when they moved to Oxford in 1873. In 1883 he held the post of assessor in Oxford Township.

Etta, as she was known to all, was an active member of the Oxford Presbyterian Church. She sang in the choir and was a Sunday School teacher for years. She passed away after a long illness at her home on July 16, 1935 at the age of 69 years, nine months, and four days. Milo contined to live on at the home place, now owned and farmed by his youngest son, Orlo, as his father had done before him. Until poor health interferred, he remained an active member of the Oxford Presbyterian Church which he had served faithfully as an elder, trustee, and superintendent of the Sunday School for many years.

Milo and Henrietta's children were Robert Burton, Edna Frances, and Orlo Leroy.

The following is a story from THE JOHNSON COUNTY FARMER, May 1951:

Vivid Johnson County History Told By Milo Ives, Oxford Pioneer

Four score and seven years ago Milo Ives came forth to Johnson County, his new home; he was then a man just four years old. Today at the age of 91 he lives with his son, Orlo, on the same property which was purchased by his father in 1863, about three miles southeast of Oxford. Mr. Ives' history of Johnson County is a personal one; for they grew up together.

Milo Ives came with his father, mother, and three brothers from Connecticut in 1863. They traveled by train as afar as Brooklyn, Iowa but completed their trip to Iowa City by stagecoach, a mode of transportation fast losing its prestige.

In Connecticut Milo's father had been a fish merchant; but business being poor, he ventured to journey westward in search of land. It was at that time that the Rebellion broke out, and it was necessary to secure a permit to move. This was not the first time for his father's adventuresome spirit to show itself. Previously he had been one of the hardy "49er contestants!" Mr. Ives relates how his father and a small group of men left Connecticut in a small sailing vessel in 1849, and how as they were rounding Cape Horn one of the men washed overboard and was devoured by sharks before he could be rescued. During this perilous six-month trip his father participated in the great rush even though he never made it to California.

After arriving in Iowa City the family stayed there while his father went about looking for land. In Marengo his father met a man named Walter Remley who approached him with, "I'll bet you're looking for land!" Mr. Remley had come from the East just a few years previous and could undoubtedly recognize a "fellow pioneer." He told Mr. Ives about an available piece of land, invited him to stay overnight and promised to take him out next morning after breakfast in his little one-horse wagon and show him the 160 acres.

But before agreeing to buy the land, Mr. Ives thought he would go further west to look the situation over; and boarding the stage coach he headed West. However, in a few weeks he returned convinced that here was the land he wanted.

The land really had no rightful owner. Two bachelor brothers, Jonathan and Sam Church, veterans of the war of 1812, received two 80-acre plots nearby as land grants from the government. Jonathan, the speculative brother, thinking that land would increase in value mortgaged his own land to buy the land later purchased by Mr. Ives. But Jonathan paid no taxes on the land nor met any of his mortgage payments, and Mr. Ives had but to pay the back taxes, etc., and the land was his.

When Jonathan Church died Mr. Ives and a neighbor, Milton ?? arranged the burial. They cut the wood and made the casket which differed from the conventional box of today being wide at the shoulders and gradually narrower - like the old mummy cases; and they put an iron peg at each end of the grave which was near a clump of evergreens that are still standing.

After his father bought the land and built a little shack, he brought the family out from Iowa City to live there. Mr. Ives remembers distinctly driving across the prairies; and at the first distant sight of the cabin his father exclaimed, "There's our mansion!"

Shortly after moving into their new home his father received his draft notice. He had registered at a little school house near Tiffin upon his arrival here from Connecticut, and since he was not past 45 years of age, he was still eligible for the draft. Mr. Ives recalls the excitement about the South seceding and President Lincoln's desire to free the slaves. But the war was soon over and Milo's father did not have to report for service.

Local politics, too, was a vital issue. The county passed a law which was enforced for two years, permitting the farmers to let their hogs run wild on the prairies. But this caused protest from many a farmer who complained that it cost more to keep the neighbor's hogs off his property than his own hogs were worth. In order to make a fence which would keep out hogs, a farmer built it five boards high with 6-in. boards, an expense out of proportion to the value of the two or three hogs he might own himself. After holding many meetings the farmers finally effected a change in the law which made it compulsory that if a man keep hogs he must confine them. However, the most noteworthy result effected by this unusual law was the way in which the hogs rid the country of snakes.

The division of counties and marking of the boundaries was also a topic of much discussion; and rumors were rampant. Mr. Ives remembers particularly hearing how some government surveyor just threw a stone to determine where to mark a certain boundary.

As long as Milo Ives can remember there had always been hogs in Johnson county - but not on the same scale as today. Most farmers had a few hogs in the summer; but during the winter it was imperative that the farmer provide corn for feed which compelled many to sell their hogs. Vaccination was unheard of; yet he can recall not a single case of cholera at that time. And radio market news would have been a tremendous value - even a daily or weekly newspaper; since the farmer had only the honesty of the stock buyer to depend upon. Hog buyers came out from Iowa City to buy the hogs, and the farmers had to drive them in to Iowa City to sell them. Occasionally a farmer upon investigation would find that he had been paid ten or fifteen cents below market price; but for the most part they were compelled to take the word of the buyer.

The first year on the farm Milo's father raised no crops, but the second year they planted a crop of rye. They had a machine which could be made into a reaper for bundles or converted into a mower to cut the slew grass for hay. Mr. Yenter, a neighbor, with his two brothers cradled the rye, Milo raked it into bundles, his two brothers bound it and his father shocked it. There were a few horses in the country at that time, but teams of oxen were far more popular.

The corn was planted by hand - kernel by kernel, and the oats also sowed by hand. The first corn plow Mr. Ives remembers belonged to Mr. Yenter. It had two shovels; and with one horse or an ox he could plough as much as five acres a day!

Although they had a crude threshing machine, the buckwheat had to be threshed by hand with a flail, because the cylinder thresher would crack the wheat. After threshing, the grain had to be hauled to Muscatine by ox team since the railroad did not get to Iowa City until 1856. Hay was never threshed for seed; prairie grass served the purpose.

Mr. Ives recalls how he used to play guide to his uncle who came from Connecticut in 1872. Even though Milo Ives was only 13 years old and there were no houses or roads for markers, he knew his way well and kept his uncle from getting lost on the prairies.

There was a great deal of hunting for deer and other wild game, but the farmers were not all dependent upon wild game for food. Usually one family in the neighborhood would go from place to place, pick up eggs and butter and take them to Iowa City. In exchange they would purchase groceries and distribute them to the various houses on their way home.

Mr. Ives remembers seeing the Mormons on their great trek to Salt Lake and their camp near Coralville; he describes the women pulling the carts and the men walking along behind - Indian fashion.

Indians, too, were still numerous when the Ives family moved to Johnson county. Mr. Ives tells about one old Indian squaw who used to come to visit his mother two or three times a year. In the spring the Indians would come across the prairie from Old Man's creek where they camped during the winter. The papooses were strapped to a skin stretched between two poles and fastened to the saddle on the sides of the pony.

The present No. 10 - sometimes called the Yenter school house - was not built until 1870, and Mr. Ives and his brothers attended a school farther east near Tiffin taught by Mr. Ward (grandfather to Francis Ward of Oxford.) All students endeavor, however, was not acedemic and Mr. Ives learned to make super deluxe squirt guns from elderberry sticks - with plunger and all. But Mr. Ward fell victim to the receiving end of a bad aim - and the weapons were destroyed. There were only twelve or fifteen students attending this school; but when the new school was built, the enrollment jumped to forty-one.

Mr. Ives' grandchildren like to hear him tell how his mother used to make candles and soap. After running water through the ashes, she would use this lye water which had soaked out to make soap. And on one occassion the Church's old cow came over and drank all the lye water; it didn't hurt the cow, but his mother had to wait to make her soap.

The universal plea, "Tell us a story, Grandpa," never goes unheeded in the Ives household. Mr. Ives tells his grandchildren how his mother used to put him into his home-made trundle bed and roll him under the big bed. But in addition to telling choice bedtime stories, Mr. Ives supplies first hand "local color history".

From: http://www.pacivilwar.com/bios/ives_chauncy.php
"Chauncy Ives, chief engineer of the Cumberland Valley Railroad, Chambersburg, was born in Lansingburg, N.Y., September 10, 1841, the eldest son of Chauncey P. and Charlotte B. (Stewart) Ives. He attended an academy at Lansingburg, one at Bridgeport (Penn.), and also at a similar institution in Ballston Spa, N.Y. Later he entered Renssalaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N.Y., remaining until the outbreak of the rebellion.

In 1861 he volunteered in the Third Michigan Cavalry; was at the siege of Corinth, Grant's movements in the rear of Vicksburg, but ill health compelled him to resign. He entered the employment of the Mahanoy & Broad Mountain Railroad Company in March, 1883, as rodman, during which service he was sent to make surveys on the defense of Philadelphia.

He was connected with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company, as assistant engineer, on its various branches for six years. In 1869 he was made chief engineer of the Southern Pennsylvania

Saturday afternoon in his country home in Redding, and after severly wounding Mrs. Underwood, took his own life.

The home of prof. Underwood and his family in the Umpawaug district, about a mile and a half southwest of West Redding station and only a short distance from Umpawaug schoolhouse. The place was formerly the Ephraim Barlow homestead and Prof.

Underwood purchased it about five years ago and by making numerous improvements to the house and grounds, converted it into one of the most comfortable of the many homes of New york business and professional men in that locality.

The traged occurred early Saturday afternoon and the first intimation any of the neighbors received of it was when Mrs. underwood and her daughter, who fled from the house as soon as they could escape from the crazed man, reached the residence of F.E. Ewing, a short distance from their own home, and told the story of the attack. Mrs. Underwood was bleeding from a deep gash in her throat but Miss Underwood was unharmed. Two employees of the Ewing farm ran to the underwood place in hope of preventing Prof.

Underwood from doing further harm, but he had already slashed his own throat with the same weapon with which he attacked the members of his family, and before medical aid came, he was dead.

The sudden unseating of Prof. Underwood's reason seems unexplainable to his family and friends, for he was a man of exceptionally happy disposition, loving and lovable, and while some of his investments had been affected by the financial depression. It was not known to his family or to any of his intimate friends that his losses had been sufficient to cause him more than slight uneasiness.

Prof. underwood went upstairs after lunch Saturday afternoon and his daughter, Miss Helen Underwood, who is about twenty-two years of age, found him at the entrance to the bathroom, at the head of the stairs a few moments later. He seized her and his manner was so unusual that she ran downstairs and called to her mother. Mrs. Underwood hastened upstairs and was at once attacked by her husband with a small knife that he had evidently taken from the kitchen. He gashed her across the right side of the throat with the weapon and there was a short struggle, in which Mrs. Underwood tried to secure possession of the knife and in doing so, received a severe cut across the little finger of her left hand.

Realizing, that alone, they were unable to cope with Prof. Underwood, the women ran from the house and fled to the home of their nearest neighbor, Frank E. Ewing, a short distance away. As soon as the members of the Ewing family learned what had happened, two of the employees of the farm, Henry W. Pickney, the coachman, and Charles Stolle, a farmhand, ran down to the Underwood place in the hope of being able to reach Prof. Underwood before he could do further harm. They found him lying upon the floor of the bathroom with a gash in his throat. He had attempted to take his own life with the weapon with which he had attacked his wife.

The men carried him into an adjoining room but he managed to escape from them and go back into the bathroom. There they had a short but fierce struggle with him and finally overpowered him and took him back to the bedroom, where they were obliged to tie him securely in order to prevent him from doing further harm to himself. Other neighbors were summoned and an attempt to save the man's life, but it was unsuccessful and Prof. Underwood died about a half four later.

Dr. Ernest H. Smith, of Redding, to whos office a telephone message was sent, was out upon a professional call and Dr. G.D.

Wright of Bethel, who had previously attended the Underwood family was summoned. Dr. Wright hurried to Redding to attend

Mrs. Underwood. He found her weak and shock and loss of blood. He gave her temporary aid and telephoned Dr. H.F. Brownlee of this city, who performed the surgical work required in closing the wound in Mrs. underwood's throat. The cut was found to be a severe one, but of such a nature that would not be fatal. Some of the smaller blood vessels and the muscles of the neck had been severed.

Mrs. Underwood and Miss Underwood remained at the Ewing home, where, Saturday evening they were informaed of Prof.

Underwood's death. Mrs. Underwood received the news calmly and bore up under the shock bravely, as did also her daughter. Miss Underwood graduated recently from Cornell University and since that time has made her home with her parents in Redding.

Dr. Smith, who is a medical examiner for Redding, made a careful investigation of the circumstances of the traged Saturday evening and sent a formal report to Coroner Charles A. Doten at Bridgeport. A certificate of death by suicide had been given by Dr.

Smith and no further inquiry is regarded as neccessary.

An Evening News reporter visited the scene of the tragedy yesterday and talked with some of the acquaintances of Prof.

Underwood, among whom were several Columbia College men, who had gone to Redding upon receipt of the news of the tragedy.

They were deeply grieved over the death of Prof. Underwood, whi was held in highest regard by his associates at the university.

Mrs. underwood and Miss Underwood, who, yesterday was almost prostrated, denied themselves to all callers yesterday at the Ewing home. They have the universal sympathy of the people of Redding, by whom the entire family has been regarded as the most delightful of neighbors and friends. The Underwoods have mingled freely with the townspeople since making Redding their home and have been active in many matters pertaining to the general welfare of the community.

Professor Underwood, who was fifty-four years of age, was one of the ablest botanists in the country and was know in Europe by reason of his scientific accomplishments. He had been a member of the faculty of Columbia College about eleven years and until he established a home in Redding, resided in New York City. He maintained a room in the Bronx, New York, remaining there when detained in New York over night by reason of his professional duties. He was in New York on Thursday, returning to Redding

Thursday evening. He held an official position in connection with the Bronx Park Botanical Gardens. As a writer upon botanical subjects, he was widely known. He was one of numerous men prominent in new york professional and Literary life who, attracted by the beauties of Redding's hills and woods, had established homes there during the last few years. The neighborhood of his home was particularly rich in botanical subjects, which were his delight.

Dr. J.A. Schaefer, and associate of Prof. Underwood at Columbia, is quoyed as saying, :He was an optomist who seemed to brighted the world of everyone whith whom he came in contact. He was a very frank man, too. In nothing that he has ever said can I find a motive for the taking of his own life and the attempt upon the lives of those he held very dear."

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, was greatly shocked when informed of the traged. He said: "I am astounded. I saw Prof. Underwood recently and he seemed to be in the best of spirits. He ranked near the top as a botanist and was a most faithful and valuable officer. His death is a great loss."

Prof. Underwood was born in New Woodstock, New york, October 26, 1853. As a boy he lived on a farm. In 1877 he was graduated from Syracuse University. He taught in various colleges in Illinois from '79 to '83; in Syracuse University from '83 to '91; in Depauw University, Indiana from '91 to '95; in the Alabama Polytechnic Institute in '95 and '96; and since 1896 had been professor of botany at Columbia. He was the author of half a dizen books of various botanical subjects.

The remains were taken in charge by undertaker F.E. Tomlinson, of Bethel. The funeral will be held tomorrow and the interment will be in the Umpawaugh Cemetery, Redding.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Lucien Marcus Underwood (1853-1907) was a botanist, educator, and founding member of the Board of Scientific Directors of The

New York Botanical Garden. Underwood was born in New Woodstock, New York on October 26, 1853. He obtained his M.S.

(1878) and Ph.D. (1879) at Syracuse University. His doctoral thesis, later published, was The Geological Formations Crossed by the Syracuse and Chenango Valley Rail Road. During his graduate education he grew interested in the study of ferns (pteridology).

In 1881 he published Our Native Ferns and How to Study Them, the first manual of North American ferns. This, as well as Moulds, Mildews, and Mushrooms (1899), achieved a popularity beyond the audience of professional botany.

Through the 1880s Underwood taught geology, botany, and natural science at several colleges and universities. Two notable appointments were Syracuse University (1883; 1887-1890) and DePauw University (1890-1895). At Syracuse he began to study the full scope of cryptogamic flora - the mosses, hepatics (liverworts), and fungi. With a Morgan Fellowship at Harvard University (1890) he studied the Sullivant and Taylor hepatic collections. Underwood's authoritative publications on the hepaticae inspired an exhaustive study of the flora of North America, The Systematic Botany of North America (later known as North American Flora), that evolved into a major collaboration with Nathaniel Lord Britton and many American botanists.

Beginning in 1892 Underwood served on the Committee on Nomenclature of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that drafted the "Rochester Code" of botanic nomenclature. The committee elected Underwood as the American delegate to the International Botanic Congress in Genoa, Italy, where he took part in the decision to set 1753 as the date for officially establishing botanical names. In 1896 Underwood succeeded Britton as Professor of Botany at Columbia University and joined the staff of The New York Botanical Garden. He participated in botanical expeditions to Puerto Rico, Cuba, Jamaica, and the Rocky Mountains and was elected to the Garden's Board of Scientific Directors, and served as chairman (1901-07). He contributed a section on pteridophyta to the Britton & Brown Illustrated Flora, was editor of the Bulletin of the Torrey Botanical Club, and assisted in the founding of the Botanical Society of America.

Tragically, Underwood took his life in 1907. His sudden death dealt Britton a personal and professional blow, leaving a void in the NYBG directorship. Despite this untimely death, Lucien Underwood is rightly remembered for his scientific accomplishments, his dedication as an educator, and his critical role as a founding member of The New York Botanical Garden.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Lucien Marcus Underwood collection consists of correspondence, research papers, manuscripts, lecture notes, and artwork covering the latter part of his botanical career, including that with the Garden. The research papers include specimen catalogues and lists, some of which relate to the Underwood collection of the New York Botanical Garden Herbarium. Underwood's field notebooks are separated from the present collection and held in the Collectors' Field Notebook series.

Additional information for John Wagner Ives:
From "A Modern History of New Haven and Eastern New Haven County,: volume 2, 1918:

Dr. .lolui W. Ives, physician and surgeon of Milford, was born in Goshen, Connecticut, January 8. 187G. and is descended from one of the old families of the state, founded in America by two brothers who came over in the Mayflower. They first located in what is now Wallingford, Connecticut, and for a considerable period the family has been represented in Goshen, where the Doctor's father, Henry H. Ives, was born. He was a successful farmer and continuously developed and cultivated his land until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he enlisted in the Second Connecticut Heavy Artillery. He was with the army for four years, was taken prisoner and on one occasion was struck by a bullet. A small Testament which he had in his vest pocket was pierced to the inner covering and thus saved his life. On another occasion a bullet tore his cap from his head and cut his hair close to the scalp but left no serious results. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Eunice M. Johnson, was a native of Cornwall, Connecticut, and represented an old Connecticut family of English lineage which was represented in the American army during the Revolutionary war. The Johnsons were very prominent and influential people of Cornwall through several generations. Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Ives became the parents of two children, of whom Harrison H. Ives now occupies the old homestead at Goshen.

Dr. Ives, however, did not care to follow agricultural pursuits and after attending private schools determined upon the practice of medicine as a life work and entered Yale University, from which he was graduated with the M. D. degree in 1900. His early life and his vacation periods, however, were spent upon the farm and in the free, open life he laid the foundation for his later success. Immediately after his graduation he was appointed interne in the General Hospital at Paterson, New .Jersey, and later he opened the Soldiers' Home, Turning his attention to general practice, he remained at Cornwall for five years, or until October, 1905, and then removed to Milford, where he continues in active practice. His attention is devoted to general practice and he now has extensive professional interests. He keeps in touch with the trend of modern scientific thought and research and his ability is manifest in the excellent' results wJiich attend his efforts. He also has other business connections, being secretary and treasurer of the Davis Drug Company of New Haven and a director and member of the executive board of the Milford Trust Company.

On the 18th of June, 1901, in Cornwall, Dr. Ives was united in marriage to Miss Agnes E. Cochrane, a native of that place and a daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Cochrane, the latter a representative of an old Cornwall family. Dr. and Mrs. Ives have one son, .John Harrison, who was born in Milford, May 9, 1909.

In his political views Dr. Ives is a republican. su]i|)orting the party wliere national issues are involved, but at local elections where only the capability of the candidate is to be considered he casts an independent ballot. While in Cornwall he filled the position of health inspector lor five years. He also had charge of the schools there, including the employment of teachers. He has ever been interested in matters relating to the public welfare and he stands for all that is most worth while in the life of the community. He has worked his way upward from boyhood, being self-supporting from the age of sixteen years. His sustained power in his profession is due in part to the fact that he is constantly adding to his knowledge through association as a member of the New Haven Medical Society, the Connecticut State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Experience, too, is constantly broadening his knowledge and promoting his efficiency and, moreover, he has always adhered to the highest professional ethics and standards, so that he enjoys in marked degree the respect and confidence of his colleagues and contemporaries.

According to John's son, Dr. Ives and his wife, Ada, were living in Yuma, Arizona where he was in practice. While there he contracted typhoid fever during an epidemic there. "Ada drove him to a hospital in San Diego, California, but en route he told Ada the critical stage had come and that he would not survive. They reached the hospital, but too late and he later succumbed." Written by John Harrison Ives, Dr. Ives' son.

Dr. Ives was married several times. Reportedly Ada was his 4th wife.

Additional information for Ada Lozier Allen:
From: http://www.findagrave.com/cgi-bin/fg.cgi?page=gr&GRid=144181668 --

Ada was the daughter of Watson S. Allen (1840 to 1919) and Henrietta Allen (Allyn) (1859 to 1929). She was born in Matteawan, Dutchess County, New York.

Ada had five half sisters: Ola Allen (1876 to 1880), Alma Allen (1878 to 1908), Elizabeth Allen (1879 to 1889), Ina Allen (1881 to 1971) and one half brother, Harrison (1882 to 1884). In addition to her half siblings, she had 4 sisters and 1 bother. Her sisters were Ruth Allen (1885 to 1918), Louise Allen (1887 to 1951), Esther Allen (1894 to 1969) and Henrietta Allen (1898 to 1937). Her lone brother was Willard M. Allen (1891 to 1933). Ada often commented on the serious competition within her household, especially amongst the girls!

Ada was married three times. In 1907 she married Nathaniel Frederick Meyer (1884 to 1963) of Newburgh, New York. In about 1918, she married Dr. John W. Ives (1876 to 1927) (reportedly in Las Vegas, NV!). On July 14th, 1949 she married Marcel Denis in Banning California.

Ada had one daughter, Ethel Allen Meyer (Rule) (1908 to 1987).

After Ada's marriage to Dr. John Ives, she spent the majority of her life in Banning, California. They started their married life in Yuma, Arizona, where Dr. Ives was a practicing physician until his untimely death in 1927 from typhoid fever. After Dr. Ives' death, Ada moved to Banning, California where she lead an active life involved in a variety community activities.

While in Banning, Ada was very involved with the Girl Scouts of America. Girl Scouts were started in Banning by her daughter, Ethel Meyer. With and without her daughter, Ada served on many committees, as a troop captain (leader), and took Girl Scouts on camping trips. In addition to Girl Scouts, she was also involved in Women's Club Activities.

During World War II, Ada served as an airplane spotter. She prided herself in being able to identify airplanes by the sound of the engine.

In 1940, Ada returned to the East Coast when she moved to Englewood, New Jersey when her daughter, Ethel, took a nursing position there. However, she soon returned to her beloved California.

After the death of her 3rd husband, Marcel, Ada moved to El Paso, Texas to live with her daughter.

She was a great lady; smart, spunky and unselfish. And what a flirt! Ada had fallen and broken her hip and was in the hospital. A young doctor came in and asked, "Ada, how old are you?" With a twinkle in her eye she looked up at the good looking young man and said, "Old enough to know not to tell you!"

Charles Edward Ives (October 20, 1874 - May 19, 1954) was an American modernist[1] composer. He is one of the first American composers of international renown,[2] though Ives' music was largely ignored during his life, and many of his works went unperformed for many years. Over time, Ives came to be regarded as an "American Original".[3] Ives combined the American popular and church-music traditions of his youth with European art music, and was among the first composers to engage in a systematic program of experimental music, with musical techniques including polytonality, polyrhythm, tone clusters, aleatoric elements, and quarter tones,[4] foreshadowing many musical innovations of the 20th century.

Sources of Ives' tonal imagery are hymn tunes and traditional songs, the town band at holiday parade, the fiddlers at Saturday night dances, patriotic songs, sentimental parlor ballads, and the melodies of Stephen Foster.

Biography

Charles Ives, c. 1889

Charles Ives was born in Danbury, Connecticut in 1874,[5] the son of George Ives, a U.S. Army bandleader in the American Civil War, and his wife Mary Parmelee. A strong influence of Charles's may have been sitting in the Danbury town square, listening to his father's marching band and other bands on other sides of the square simultaneously. George Ives' unique music lessons were also a strong influence on Charles; George Ives took an open-minded approach to musical theory, encouraging his son to experiment in bitonal and polytonal harmonizations. It was from his father that Charles Ives also learned the music of Stephen Foster.[6] Ives became a church organist at the age of 14[7] and wrote various hymns and songs for church services, including his Variations on 'America' .[8]

Ives moved to New Haven in 1893, enrolling in the Hopkins School, where he captained the baseball team. In September 1894, Ives entered Yale University, studying under Horatio Parker. Here he composed in a choral style similar to his mentor, writing church music and even an 1896 campaign song for William McKinley.[9] On November 4, 1894, Charles's father died, a crushing blow to the young composer, but to a large degree Ives continued the musical experimentation he had begun with George Ives.

At Yale, Ives was a prominent figure; he was a member of HeBoule, Delta Kappa Epsilon (Phi chapter) and Wolf's Head Society, and sat as chairman of the Ivy Committee.[9] He enjoyed sports at Yale and played on the varsity football team. Michael C. Murphy, his coach, once remarked that it was a "crying shame" that Charles Ives spent so much time at music as otherwise he could have been a champion sprinter.[10] His works Calcium Light Night and Yale-Princeton Football Game show the influence of college and sports on Ives' composition. He wrote his Symphony No. 1 as his senior thesis under Parker's supervision.[9]

He continued his work as a church organist until May 1902. In 1899, he moved to employment with the insurance agency Charles H. Raymond & Co., where he stayed until 1906. In 1907, upon the failure of Raymond & Co., he and his friend Julian Myrick formed their own insurance agency Ives & Co., which later became Ives & Myrick, where he remained until he retired.[11] During his career as an insurance executive, Ives devised creative ways to structure life-insurance packages for people of means, which laid the foundation of the modern practice of estate planning.[12] His Life Insurance with Relation to Inheritance Tax, published in 1918, was well received. As a result of this he achieved considerable fame in the insurance industry of his time, with many of his business peers surprised to learn that he was also a composer. In his spare time he composed music and, until his marriage, worked as an organist in Danbury and New Haven as well as Bloomfield, New Jersey and New York City.[9]

In 1907, Ives suffered the first of several "heart attacks" (as he and his family called them) that he had throughout his lifetime. These attacks may have been psychological in origin rather than physical. Following his recovery from the 1907 attack, Ives entered into one of the most creative periods of his life as a composer.

After marrying Harmony Twitchell in 1908,[11] they moved into their own apartment in New York. He had a remarkably successful career in insurance, and continued to be a prolific composer until he suffered another of several heart attacks in 1918, after which he composed very little, writing his very last piece, the song "Sunrise", in August 1926.[11] In 1922, Ives published his 114 Songs, which represents the breadth of his work as a composer - it includes art songs, songs he wrote as a teenager and young man, and highly dissonant songs such as "The Majority."[11]

According to his wife, one day in early 1927 he came downstairs with tears in his eyes. He could compose no more, he said, "nothing sounds right."[citation needed] There have been numerous theories advanced to explain the silence of his late years, which seems as mysterious as the last several decades of the life of Jean Sibelius, who also stopped composing at almost the same time. While Ives had stopped composing, and was increasingly plagued by health problems, he did continue to revise and refine his earlier work, as well as oversee premieres of his music.[11] After continuing health problems, including diabetes, in 1930 he retired from his insurance business, which gave him more time to devote to his musical work, but he was unable to write any new music. During the 1940s he revised his Concord Sonata, publishing it in 1947 (an earlier version of the sonata and the accompanying prose volume, Essays Before a Sonata were privately printed in 1920).[13]

Ives died of a stroke in 1954 in New York City. His widow bequeathed the royalties from his music to the American Academy of Arts and Letters for the Charles Ives Prize.[14]

Music

Early period (before 1900)

As a youth, Charles was musically trained by his father George Ives, the bandmaster in Danbury, Connecticut. Charles played drums in his father's band at an early age, then learned to play piano and organ as his "main" instrument. He was a sought-after organist in some of the local churches as a teenager and once received a favorable newspaper review. George Ives engaged his son with challenging musical exercises such as alternative tunings and bitonal singing exercises. The elder Ives experimented with having two marching bands start at opposite ends of town playing two different songs in different keys while marching towards each other. Charles later credited his father as the seminal musical influence in his life.

Ives was formally trained in music at Yale. His First Symphony shows a grasp of the academic skills needed to write in the traditional sonata form of the late 19th century, as well as a tendency to display an individual and iconoclastic harmonic style. His father was a band leader, and like Hector Berlioz, Ives was fascinated with both outdoor music and instrumentation. His attempts to fuse these interests coupled with his devotion to Beethoven set the direction for the remainder of his musical life.

Ives published a large collection of his songs, many of which had piano parts that paralleled modern movements in Europe, including bitonality and pantonality. He was an accomplished pianist who could improvise in a variety of styles, including those then quite new. Though he is now best known for his orchestral music, he composed two string quartets and other works of chamber music. His work as an organist led him to write Variations on "America" in 1891, which he premiered at a recital celebrating the Fourth of July. The piece takes the tune (which is the same one as is used for the national anthem of the United Kingdom) through a series of fairly standard but witty variations; it was not published until 1949. The variations differ sharply: a running line, a set of close harmonies, a march, and a polonaise; the interludes are one of the first uses of bitonality;[15] William Schuman created an arrangement for orchestra in 1964 which was consequently transcribed for symphonic band by William E. Rhoads in 1968.

Middle period (1900-1910)

Around the turn of twentieth century Ives composed his Symphony No. 2, signifying a departure from the conservative approach of his composition teacher at Yale, Horatio Parker. His first symphony is a more conventional piece since Parker had insisted that he stick to the older European style. However, the second symphony, composed after he had graduated, adopted new techniques that included musical quotations, especially of American folk themes in the final movement, unusual phrasing and orchestration, and even a blatantly dissonant 11-note chord ending the work. The second symphony foreshadows his later compositional style even though the piece is relatively conservative by Ives' standards.

In 1906, Ives composed what some have argued was the first radical musical work of the twentieth century, Central Park in the Dark.[16] The piece evokes an evening comparing sounds from nearby nightclubs in Manhattan (playing the popular music of the day, ragtime, quoting "Hello! Ma Baby" and even Sousa's "Washington Post March") with the mysterious dark and misty qualities of the Central Park woods (played by the strings). The string harmony uses shifting chord structures that are not solely based on thirds but a combination of thirds, fourths, and fifths. Near the end of the piece the remainder of the orchestra builds up to a grand chaos ending on a dissonant chord, leaving the string section to end the piece save for a brief violin duo superimposed over the unusual chord structures.

Ives had composed two symphonies, but it is with The Unanswered Question (1906), written for the highly unusual combination of trumpet, four flutes, and string orchestra, that he established the mature sonic world that became his signature style. The strings (located offstage) play very slow, chorale-like music throughout the piece while on several occasions the trumpet (positioned behind the audience) plays a short motif that Ives described as "the eternal question of existence".[citation needed] Each time the trumpet is answered with increasingly shrill outbursts from the flutes (onstage) - apart from the last: the unanswered question. The piece is typical Ives - it juxtaposes various disparate elements, it appears to be driven by a narrative never fully revealed to the audience, and it is tremendously mysterious. It has become one of his more popular works.[17] Leonard Bernstein borrowed its title for his Charles Eliot Norton Lectures in 1973, noting that he always thought of the piece as a musical question, not a metaphysical one.

Mature period (1910-1923)

Starting around 1910 Ives began composing his most accomplished works including the Holiday Symphony and arguably his best-known piece, Three Places in New England.

Pieces such as The Unanswered Question were almost certainly influenced by the New England transcendentalist writers Ralph Waldo Emerson and Henry David Thoreau.[11] These were important influences to Ives, as he acknowledged in his Piano Sonata No. 2: "Concord, Mass., 1840-60" (1909-15), which he described as an "...impression of the spirit of transcendentalism that is associated in the minds of many with Concord, Mass., of over a half century ago... undertaken in impressionistic pictures of Emerson and Thoreau, a sketch of the Alcotts, and a scherzo supposed to reflect a lighter quality which is often found in the fantastic side of Hawthorne."[18]

The sonata is possibly Ives' best-known piece for solo piano (although it should be noted that there is an optional part for flute). (A part for viola in the "Emerson" movement is not intended for a viola player - it is simply the "viola part" from the original "Emerson" Concerto sketch, which was also to be played by bassoon and tubular bells.) Rhythmically and harmonically, it is typically adventurous, and it demonstrates Ives' fondness for quotation - on several occasions the opening motto from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony is quoted. It also contains one of the most striking examples of Ives' experimentalism: in the second movement, he instructs the pianist to use a 143?4 in (37 cm) piece of wood to produce a dense but generally very soft cluster chord. All these effects are combined to create one of the towering masterworks of 20th century piano literature-an unprecedented masterpiece of American music.

Perhaps the most remarkable piece of orchestral music Ives completed was his Fourth Symphony (1910-16). The list of forces required to perform the work alone is extraordinary. The work closely mirrors The Unanswered Question. There is no shortage of novel effects. (A tremolando is heard throughout the second movement. A fight between discordance and traditional tonal music is heard in the final movement. The piece ends quietly with just the percussion playing at a distance.) In it, Ives finally resolves all of his compositional issues and the full force of his considerable genius is heard. The final movement can be seen as an apotheosis of his work and a culmination of his musical achievement. A complete performance was not given until 1965, almost half a century after the symphony was completed, and more than a decade after Ives' death.

Ives left behind material for an unfinished Universe Symphony, which he was unable to assemble in his lifetime despite two decades of work. This was due to his health problems as well as his shifting conception of the work. There have been several attempts at completion or performing version. However, none has found its way into general performance.[19] The symphony takes the ideas in the Symphony No. 4 to an even higher level, with complex cross-rhythms and difficult layered dissonance along with unusual instrumental combinations.

Ives' chamber works include the String Quartet No. 2, where the parts are often written at extremes of counterpoint, ranging from spiky dissonance in the movement labeled "Arguments" to transcendentally slow. This range of extremes is frequent in Ives' music - crushing blare and dissonance contrasted with lyrical quiet - and carried out by the relationship of the parts slipping in and out of phase with each other. Ives' idiom, like Mahler's, employed highly independent melodic lines. It is regarded as difficult to play because many of the typical signposts for performers are not present. This work had a clear influence on Elliott Carter's Second String Quartet, which is similarly a four-way theatrical conversation.

Reception

Ives' music was largely ignored during his lifetime, particularly during the years in which he actively composed. Many of his published works went unperformed even many years after his death in 1954. But his reputation in more recent years has greatly increased. Juilliard commemorated the 50th anniversary of Ives' death by performing his music over six days in 2004. His musical experiments, including his increasing use of dissonance, were not well received by his contemporaries. Furthermore, the difficulties in performing the rhythmic complexities in his major orchestral works made them daunting challenges even decades after they were composed.

Early supporters of his music included Henry Cowell, Elliott Carter and Aaron Copland. Cowell's periodical New Music published a substantial number of Ives' scores (with the composer's approval), but for almost 40 years Ives had few performances that he did not arrange or back, generally with Nicolas Slonimsky as the conductor.[13] After seeing a copy of Ives' self-published 114 Songs during the 1930s, Copland published a newspaper article praising the collection.

Ives began to acquire some public recognition during the 1930s, with performances of a chamber orchestra version of his Three Places in New England both in the U.S. and on tour in Europe by conductor Nicolas Slonimsky and the New York Town Hall premiere of his Concord Sonata by pianist John Kirkpatrick in 1939, which led to favorable commentary in the major New York newspapers. Later, around the time of the composer's death in 1954, Kirkpatrick teamed with soprano Helen Boatwright for the first extended recorded recital of Ives' songs for the obscure Overtone label (Overtone Records catalog number 7). Boatwright and Kirkpatrick recorded a new selection of songs for the Ives Centennial Collection that Columbia Records published in 1974.

His obscurity lifted a bit in the 1940s, when he met Lou Harrison, a fan of his music who began to edit and promote it. Most notably, Harrison conducted the premiere of the Symphony No. 3, The Camp Meeting (1904) in 1946.[20] The next year, this piece won Ives the Pulitzer Prize for Music. Ives gave the prize money away (half of it to Harrison), saying "prizes are for boys, and I'm all grown up".[21] Ives himself was a great financial supporter of twentieth century music, often supporting works that were written by other composers. This he did in secret, telling his beneficiaries it was really his wife who wanted him to do so.[22] Nicolas Slonimsky said in 1971, "He financed my entire career."[23]

At this time, Ives was also promoted by Bernard Herrmann, who worked as a conductor at CBS and in 1940 became principal conductor of the CBS Symphony Orchestra. While there, he championed Ives's music. When the two met, Hermann confessed that he had tried his hand at performing the Concord Sonata. Remarkably, Ives, who actually avoided the radio and the phonograph, agreed to make a series of piano recordings from 1933 to 1943 that were later issued by Columbia Records on a special LP set issued for Ives' centenary in 1974. New World Records issued 42 tracks of Ives' recordings on CD on April 1, 2006.[24] One of the more unusual recordings, made in New York City in 1943, features Ives playing the piano and singing the words to his popular World War I song They Are There!, which he composed in 1917, then revised in 1942-43 for World War II.

Recognition of Ives's music steadily improved. He received praise from Arnold Schoenberg, who regarded him as a monument to artistic integrity, and from the New York School of William Schuman. Schoenberg's widow eventually found a note written by her husband shortly after his death (three years before Ives himself died). The note was originally written in 1944 when Schoenberg was living in Los Angeles and teaching at UCLA. It stated:

There is a great Man living in this Country - a composer. He has solved the problem how to preserve one's self-esteem and to learn [sic]. He responds to negligence by contempt. He is not forced to accept praise or blame. His name is Ives.[25]

There is a report that Ives also won the admiration of Gustav Mahler, who said that Ives was a true musical revolutionary. Reportedly, Mahler talked of premiering Ives' Third Symphony with the New York Philharmonic, but the famous composer soon died (in 1911) thus preventing the premiere. However, the source of this story is Ives; since Mahler died, there was no way to verify whether Mahler had seen the score of the symphony or decided to perform it in 1911-12 season of the New York Philharmonic.[26] However, what is true is that Ives regularly attended New York Philharmonic concerts and probably saw Mahler conduct the Philharmonic in Carnegie Hall.

In 1951, Leonard Bernstein conducted the world premiere of Ives' Second Symphony in a broadcast concert by the New York Philharmonic. The Iveses heard the performance on their cook's radio and were amazed at the audience's warm reception to the music. Bernstein continued to conduct Ives' music and made a number of recordings with the Philharmonic for Columbia Records. He even honored Ives on one of his televised youth concerts and in a special disc included with the reissue of the 1960 recording of the second symphony and the Fourth of July movement from Ives' Holiday Symphony.

Another pioneering Ives recording, undertaken during the 1950s, was the first complete set of the four violin sonatas, performed by Cleveland Orchestra concertmaster Rafael Druian and John Simms. Leopold Stokowski took on Symphony No. 4 in 1965, regarding the work as "the heart of the Ives problem". The Carnegie Hall world premiere by the American Symphony Orchestra led to the first recording of the music. Another promoter of Ives was choral conductor Gregg Smith, who made a series of recordings of the composer's shorter works during the 1960s, including first stereo recordings of the psalm settings and arrangements of many short pieces for theater orchestra. The Juilliard String Quartet recorded the two string quartets during the 1960s.

Today, conductor Michael Tilson Thomas is an enthusiastic exponent of Ives' symphonies as is composer and biographer Jan Swafford. Ives' work is regularly programmed in Europe. Ives has also inspired pictorial artists, most notably Eduardo Paolozzi, who entitled one of his 1970s sets of prints Calcium Light Night, each print being named for an Ives' piece (including Central Park in the Dark). In 1991, Connecticut's legislature designated Ives as that state's official composer.[27]

The Scottish baritone Henry Herford began a survey of Ives' songs in 1990, but this remains incomplete because the record company involved (Unicorn-Kanchana) collapsed. Pianist-composer and Wesleyan University professor Neely Bruce has made a life's study of Ives. To date, he has staged seven parts of a concert series devoted to the complete songs of Ives. Musicologist David Gray Porter reconstructed a piano concerto, the "Emerson" Concerto, from Ives' sketches. A recording of the work was released by Naxos Records.

Compositions

Main article: List of compositions by Charles Ives

Note: Because Ives often made several different versions of the same piece, and because his work was generally ignored during his lifetime, it is often difficult to put exact dates on his compositions. The dates given here are sometimes best guesses. There have also been controversial speculations that Ives purposely misdated his own pieces earlier or later than actually written.

Variations on America for organ (1892)
The Circus Band (a march describing the Circus coming to town)
Psalm settings (14, 42, 54, 67, 90, 135, 150) (1890s)[28]
String Quartet No. 1, From the Salvation Army (1897-1900)
Symphony No. 1 in D minor (1898-1901)
Symphony No. 2 (Ives gave dates of 1899-1902; analysis of handwriting and manuscript paper suggests 1907-1909)[29]
Symphony No. 3, The Camp Meeting (1908-10)
Central Park in the Dark for chamber orchestra (1906, 1909)
The Unanswered Question for chamber group (1906; rev. 1934)
Piano Sonata No. 1 (1909-16)

Piano Trio (c1909-10, rev. c1914-15)
Violin Sonata No. 1 (1910-14; rev. ca. 1924)
Violin Sonata No. 4, Children's Day at the Camp Meeting (1911-16)
A Symphony: New England Holidays (1904-1913)
"Robert Browning" Overture (1911-14)
Symphony No. 4 (1912-18; rev. 1924-26)
String Quartet No. 2 (1913-15)
Pieces for chamber ensemble grouped as "Sets," some called Cartoons or Take-Offs or Songs Without Voices (1906-18); includes Calcium Light Night
Three Places in New England (Orchestral Set No. 1) (1910-14; rev. 1929)
Violin Sonata No. 2 (1914-17)
Violin Sonata No. 3 (1914-17)
Orchestral Set No. 2 (1915-19)
Piano Sonata No. 2, Concord, Mass., 1840-60 (1916-19) (revised many times by Ives)
Universe symphony (incomplete, 1915-28, worked on symphony until his death in 1954)
114 Songs (composed various years 1887-1921, published 1922.)
Three Quarter Tone Piano Pieces (1923-24)
Orchestral Set No. 3 (incomplete, 1919-26, notes added after 1934)

Ives proposed in 1920 that there be a 20th Amendment to the US Constitution. The amendment would authorize citizens to submit legislative proposals to Congress. Members of Congress would then cull the proposals, selecting 10 each year as referendums for popular vote by the nation's electorate. He even had printed at his own expense several thousand copies of a pamphlet on behalf of his proposed amendment. The pamphlet proclaimed the need to curtail "THE EFFECTS OF TOO MUCH POLITICS IN OUR representative DEMOCRACY." His proposal joined his music in being ignored during his lifetime.

A fistful of dollars: how the Charles Ives House was sold
September 19, 2012 By Norman Lebrecht

We have received the inside working of the transaction from one of the activists who worked, with great dedication and in close cooperation with the local authorities, to save the house for posterity.

It has been sold by the composer's heritage-proof grandson to a weekender couple who intend, it is understood, to knock it down and replace it with a customised modern dwelling for their leisure and opleasure. petition to persuade Mr Tyler to think again has gather close to 1,000 signatures. It appears that the vendor needed an instant cash deal.

Here are the grim details:

About two weeks ago, the Charles Ives Society, the Town of Redding and the Redding Land Trust jointly offered US $1.32 million for the Ives House, which has been listed with real estate broker Paul Lutz of Coldwell Banker (Paul.Lutz@coldwellbankermoves.com) for an asking price of $1.5 million since sometime in 2011.

The offer was rejected by Charles Ives Tyler, the owner of the Ives House (the composer's grandson), which motivated the Ives Society buyers' group to increase its offer to $1.52 million, $20,000 MORE than the asking price.

This higher offer from the Ives Society was also rejected last week, with the broker informing them that Mr. Tyler had instead accepted a cash offer (i.e. no mortgage contingency) from a family who wants to use the residence as a weekend home.

It is not clear how much the family has agreed to pay for the House, although we believe that one of the reasons Tyler (and the broker) preferred the private party transaction was that it could be consummated more quickly.

Art Cummings: Home and legacy of Charles Ives deserve to be preserved
Published 3:12 p.m., Saturday, September 29, 2012
Volunteers grateful for opportunityPage 1 of 1
Just a few short weeks ago, there was good reason to believe that the Redding home of Charles Ives -- America's greatest classical composer -- would be sold to parties interested in preserving the property for posterity.

Today, however, those hopes have dimmed.

According to local and national preservation officials, the property's owner -- Charles Ives Tyler, grandson of the legendary composer -- prefers to sell the brown-shingled house, red barn, cottage and land on Umpawaug Road to a private buyer.

That is indeed disappointing news.

Ives was born in Danbury in 1874 and lived his first 20 years in the city. But he spent more than four decades at his Redding home, where he wrote some of his greatest works.

Given Ives' status as a giant of American musical history, his legacy -- and his home -- deserve to be preserved. To their credit, the town of Redding, the Redding Land Trust and the Charles Ives Society have collaborated in a good-faith effort to purchase the property and preserve the Ives legacy.

And upon hearing of Tyler's decision to sell to a private party, a music professor at the University of New Hampshire has started a petition drive to convince Tyler to change his mind.

In fairness, the property belongs to Tyler, and he can sell it to whomever he wishes.

But it would be a good thing -- some would say the right thing -- for Tyler to rethink things and sell the property to groups that would preserve it and his grandfather's legacy.

It might be useful for Tyler to consider the recent history of the home and studio of Winslow Homer -- the great American landscape and seascape artist -- on Prouts Neck in Scarborough, Maine.

That seaside property is where Homer lived and worked from the mid-1880s until his death in 1910 and where he painted many of his finest works.

After his death, the property was passed down through the family and ultimately to Homer's great-grandnephew, Charles "Chip" Homer Willauer, who several years ago decided to sell it to a group that would preserve it and the legacy of Winslow Homer.

Willauer sold the property in 2006 to the Portland Museum of Art, which undertook a multi-year, multi-million-dollar renovation and restoration of the three-room home and studio.

Just this past week, the home/studio was made available for public tours in conjunction with the opening of an exhibition, "Weatherbeaten: Winslow Homer and Maine."

Wouldn't it be wonderful if a similar scenario could someday take place at the Charles Ives home in Redding?

Hopefully, Charles Ives Tyler will reconsider his apparent decision to sell to a private buyer and instead allow the parties interested in preservation to purchase the property.

If that does not happen, hopefully the new owner will truly respect what he or she has acquired and will treat the property accordingly.

And hopefully the new owner will be willing to work out some sort of arrangement with local and national officials to ensure that the property and legacy of Charles Ives are preserved for posterity.

In October 1918 he had a serious heart attack just before his 44th birthday lingering weakness from his heart attack

Ives's infirmities steadily eroded his energy, creative and otherwise. Finally one day around 1927 Ives came downstairs in tears and told his wife, "I can't seem to compose any more. I try and try and nothing comes out right."

For the rest of his life Ives was an invalid.

Health Problems

In 1918, Ives suffered a severe heart attack, and he never fully recovered from it, despite the fact that he would live many more years. In retrospect, Ives probably also suffered from diabetes. Most likely, this disease was the underlying cause of the heart attack and many other maladies that Ives continued to experience for the remainder of his life. As Swafford points out, Ives' poor health led to focus on two new priorities:

Then suddenly the creative flow was stopped. One month before the end of the war in 1918 he had a serious breakdown whose exact nature seems hard to determine; it is generally described as a physical illness and he never seems to have really recovered.

From: http://www.charlesives.org/02bio.htm

Two more things of great significance happened to Ives in 1906, one ominous and the other fruitful. After living since childhood at a near-manic pace--what allowed him to compose voluminously despite working full-time in an office--Ives had a physical breakdown, probably a heart attack and associated depression. Also that year he began to court a settlement-house nurse named Harmony Twichell, daughter of a well-known Hartford minister. Charlie had met her during his Yale years--she was the sister of a school friend--but their romance did not kindle until a decade later. After a long Victorian courtship, during which they found a transforming spiritual rapport, Charles and Harmony were married in June 1908. Between them they created a kind of theology around their relationship, seeing their love as a reflection of divine love, his music their means of spreading that love into the world. After years of prophetic experiments, Ives's full maturity can be dated from his marriage to Harmony Twichell.

Two more things of great significance happened to Ives in 1906, one ominous and the other fruitful. After living since childhood at a near-manic pace--what allowed him to compose voluminously despite working full-time in an office--Ives had a physical breakdown, probably a heart attack and associated depression. Also that year he began to court a settlement-house nurse named Harmony Twichell, daughter of a well-known Hartford minister. Charlie had met her during his Yale years--she was the sister of a school friend--but their romance did not kindle until a decade later. After a long Victorian courtship, during which they found a transforming spiritual rapport, Charles and Harmony were married in June 1908. Between them they created a kind of theology around their relationship, seeing their love as a reflection of divine love, his music their means of spreading that love into the world. After years of prophetic experiments, Ives's full maturity can be dated from his marriage to Harmony Twichell.

Although memorialized here with his son, William's ashes were scattered at the roundup camp on Spring Hill at the Cochrane Ranch.
William Carlos Ives, politician and supreme court justice in Alberta, came with his parents to western Canada in 1881 as an infant and was raised on a ranch near Pincher Creek. Leaving home to work as a cowhand at 14, by the age of 17 he was working at the Cochrane Ranch running over 1500 head of cattle.
He left Alberta on a cattle train headed to Quebec in 1894 with his savings and in 1889 had earned his law degree from McGill University. After articling, then practicing in Montreal, he returned to the west in 1901 where he practiced in Lethbridge. In 1914 he was appointed to the Supreme Court of Alberta. In 1942, he became Chief Justice, Trial Division, of the Supreme Court, retiring in 1944.
[Quote from Society of Alberta Archives]
"Ives was well known on the bench for his placid demeanour. His colleagues referred to his sphinx-like "poker face." He never interrupted counsel, and rarely uttered a word during a trial except for the occasional injection of dry humour. He listened so carefully to the arguments that counsel seldom knew how he would rule on a case. When he made a judgment, however, it would be strong and decisive. Ives' written judgments were short and to the point. He rarely reserved cases, and considered that if a lawyer brought more than two law books into court his case must be weak. Noted for his impartiality, he was criticized at times for assisting young, inexperienced lawyers in the courtroom. In the end, his strength as a judge was his ability to assess human nature and the character of the parties and the witnesses."

Additional information for Paul Pomeroy Ives:
From "A Modern History of New Haven and Eastern New Haven County," volume 2, 1918, p. 752:

Paul Pomeroy Ives, a member of the state legislature and a poultry expert of Connecticut whose name has become a synonym in connection with the raising of Black Langshans. lias in all his business and public interests stood for progress and improvement and has done niuoli to further development in the state, especially in the field of poultry raising.
He was born in Meriden, Connecticut, May 28, 1877, a son of Charles Pomeroy and I'lioebe (Taintor) Ives. The father was born and reared in Meriden. where he engaged in the practice of law for fifteen years, but finding no satisfaction in his profession, he abandoned the law and took up the occupation of farming at Berlin. Connecticut. He also conducted a restaurant on State street in New Haven for a few years but is now concentrating his attention and energies upon general agiicultural pursuits at Branford, Connecticut. While living at Berlin he served as a member of the town board for some time. His wife is a native of .Sheldon, Massachusetts, and by their marriage they became the parents of six children, of whom five are yet living: Paul Pomeroy: Eli Butler, who is a physician and surgeon of Bridgeport. Connecticut; Ho])e, the wife of Frank Collins, of Branford: Eugenia, the wife of J. E. Stannard; and Mary, at home.
Paul P. Ives acquired his education in the district schools of Berlin and the city schools of Xew Haven and afterward learned the blacksmith's trade in East Haven, also acquiring a knowledge of tool making there. In 1902 he purchased the blacksmith shop of John W. (irovoner near the East River bridge on Clapboard hill, in Guilford,. where he conducted business for five years. He was a partner of Mr. Grovener for five years and on the expiration of that period purchased the shop, which he conducted alone until .June 1, 1916, when he sold out. He owns a valuable farm of twenty acres on the Boston post road on Clapboard hill in (Juilford. where he raises Black Langshans. He is well known all over the east as a breeder and exhibitor of Black Langshans and mention of that breed at once brings to mind the name of Mr. Ives, for his name is known wherever chickens are exhibited. He has won many prizes on his exhibits of birds at Xew York and Boston poultry shows.

(In the 31st of April, 1917. he was appointed on the staff of the Xew Haven County Farm Bureau, in charge of the farm employment bureau, which has headquarters in the Manufacturers' exhibit hall on Cliapel street in New Haven. Mr. Ives is also the poultry expert on the staff of the New Haven County Farm Bureau and he is director of the Boys and Girls Club of Xew Haven county, directing the organizations of girls' clubs in the rural districts for the raising of pigs, for the [jroduction of corn and also canning clubs, in fact clubs for every activity that has to do with agricultural interests. He is vice president of the New Haven County Poultry Club, is the secretary of the Connecticut Poultry Breeders Society. Inc., a position which he has held for seven years, serving also on the executive com-uiittee, and is a life member of the American Poultry Association, of which he is acting as state organizer for Connecticut.

On the 27th of November, 1902, in New Haven, Mr. Ives was married to Miss Blanche Hammond, wlio was born in New Rochelle, Westchester county, New York, but was reared in Torriiigton in the home of her parents, Rev. Samuel and Frances (Howell) Hammond, who were natives of Riverliead. Long Island. The father devoted his life to the work of the Methodist Episcopal ministry. To Mr. and Mrs. Ives have been born three children, Charles Ponieroy, Eugenia Hammond and Frances Howell, all natives of Guilford.

In politics Mr. Ives has always been an earnest advocate of republican principles. He has served as justice of the peace, on the board of finance and as a member of the town committee for seven years. In 1916 he was elected representative to the state legislature and is now serving on the shell fishery and game committee and as clerk of the agi-icultural committee. His wide experience makes him a valuable member of these committees. In Masonic circles he is well known as a past master of St. Albans Lodge, No. 38, F. &. A. M., of Guilfonl. and as charter member of Guilford Grange, No. 84, of the Pat|rons of Husbandry, of which he became the first secretary. He is likewise connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and he is a member of the executive committee of the Guilford Agricultural Society. Advancement has been his watchword and his course has been marked by steady progress in all that he lias undertaken. His business ability has found expression in his growing success and he is now one of the prosperous residents of Guilford.

INJURIES FATAL TO MRS. GUERNSEY
Wife of Well Known Piano Dealer Dies As Result of Automobile Accident

As the result of injuries sustained when she was struck by an automobile at North Irving Avenue and Linden Street Friday night, Mrs. Mary O. Guernsey, sixty-eight years old, wife of J. W. Guernsey, the well known piano dealer of this city, died, at the Hahnemann hospital Saturday night at 7 o'clock. In the accident Mrs. Guernsey sustained concussion of the brain.

The driver of the automobile that struck Mrs. Guernsey speeded away immediately after the accident and has not been apprehended as yet The police claim to have the license number and declare they will make an arrest within a short time. It is said that the automobile was either a five or seven passenger Locomobile. When Mrs. Guernsey was first removed to the hospital it was thought she suffered a fractured skull, but an operatlon revealed concussion of the brain. She rested fairly comfortably Saturday morning, but late in the afternoon a change for the worse was noticed.

Mrs. Guernsey was one of the best-known women In this city and valley. She lived here for the last forty-eight years, and during the years 1873, 1874 and 1875 she taught in the public schools of this city, when Prof. Joseph Rooney was superintendent of schools.

She was the daughter of Edwin E. Ives. She is survived by her husband, four daughters, Mrs. N. B. Spencer, of Honesdale; Mrs. John J. Roderick, of Allentown; Mrs. A. C. Curtis, of Glen Cove, L. I.; Miss Clara Guernsey, and one son, Edwin W. Guernsey, of Wilkes-Barre.

Four brothers also survive, Albert G. Ives, cashier of the First National bank; George H. Ives, Wilkes-Barre; Henry M. lves, Dalton, Pa., and Edwin W. Ives, New Jersey. . The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with short services at the home, 1410 Linden Street. Rev. U. W. Wellburn. D. D.,

JAMES W. GUERNSEY

For a half of a century a business man of the city of Scranton, James W. Guernsey entered business life only after failing health had compelled the abandonment of a plan of activity that he had cherished through young manhood, the practice of law. He is a native of Pennsylvania, descendant of a New England family that was settled in Pennsylvania by James W. Guernsey's grandfather, Joseph U. Guernsey, coming from Connecticut.

(I) Joseph U. Guernsey made his home in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, in 1802, and there become a man of position and prominence. He married and they had children : John W., for many years a member of the Pennsylvania state legislature; Peter B. ; Warren; Levi B., of whom further; Hiram C. ; Anna ; Sophia, married Peter William and had a son, Henry W., for many years a judge of the superior court of Pennsylvania, passing a great part of that time as president judge.

(H) Levi B. Guernsey, son of Joseph U. Guernsey, was born in Canaan, Connecticut, in 1798. He married Hannah P. Carrier and they had children: George M., married Martha Roche and they had children, Maud and Fannie; Peter C, married Martha Allen and they had children ; James W., of whom further; J. Frank; Ophelia C, died young; Abbie M., married George M. Sweet, a soldier of the Union army, who met his death at the battle of Gettysburg; Sophia W., married William Clark; Almira C, married Alonzo M. Stearns ; Marie M., married J. K. Brady, of Scranton ; Alice, married Frank Lamberson.

(HI) James W. Guernsey, son of Levi B. and Hannah P. (Carrier; Guernsey, was born at Bridgewater, Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, December 31, 1846. He there attended the public schools until he was eighteen years of age. After graduating from Montrose Academy, he was for one year a school teacher, then went to Michigan and for three years taught in the State Reform School at Lansing. At the end of this time he began the studv of law under the direction of Professor Angell, one of the most brilliant lawyers and most able jurists of his day, but ill health made it necessary to relinquish his legal ambitions. After discontinuing his studies for the profession of law Mr. Guernsey moved to Scranton, there establishing himself in the sale of musical instruments, a line he had since followed. His stock includes instruments of all kinds, wind and string, all of a high and reliable grade, and through his long continuance in this business he has come to own a steady patronage, held to his store because of the uniformly courteous and attentive treatment there received and because there value is given in every transaction. He has prospered in gratifying measure, his business being not only the oldest of its kind in the city, but one which compares more than favorably with others of a §imilar nature. Mr. Guernsey is a member of the Masonic Order, with which he became identified in Lansing, Michigan, and belongs to the Second Presbyterian Church of Scranton. His political stand is independent.

Mr. Guernsey married Mary C. Ives, a teacher of the Scranton public schools, and they are the parents of the following children : Jessie, married N. B. Spencer, of Honesdale, Pennsylvania, and is the mother of James and Ruth ; May, married A. C. Curtis ; Edwin ; Bertha, married John Roderick, and they are the parents of Lois and Mary ; Clara, unmarried, acting bookkeeper and active in the business with her father.

John Guernsey, progenitor of the Guernsey family in America appears in Milford, CT about 1634 and settled there having come from the Isle of Guernsey, near England. (History of Waterbury, CT by Bronson, Appendix p. 491) Two children, John and Joseph who was born in 1630.

Joseph Guernsey, son of John and ? Guernsey, was born in 1630 and married on April 10, 1663 to Hannah Coley, daughter of Samuel Coley, Sr. they resided at Milford, CT where he was a "Free Planter." Two children: Joseph born 1674 and Hannah.

Joseph Guernsey, son of Joseph and Hannah (Coley) Guernsey, was born at Milford, CT in 1674. He was a large land owner. He married Hannah Disbrow, daughter of General Disbrow. Joseph Guernsey died at Woodbury, CT on Sept. 15,1754. Five sons and a daughter.

John Guernsey, fourth son of Joseph and Hannah (Disbrow) Guernsey, was born at Waterbury, CT on Oct. 28, 1734. Died Feb. 27, 1799 and is buried at Amenia, NY near the grave of his father. Married on March 24, 1757 to Azuba Buel. she died June 24, 1789 at Amenia, NY and is buried there. Fifteen children. About 1788 John Guernsey was given a patent for 1000 acres of land on the west side of the Susquehanna River near the bridge which was build in 1840 in what is now the town of Windsor, Broome Co., NY. On April 16, 1700 he had also received a patent for 630 acres of land in Randelph, Broome, Co., NY (Broome Co. History).

The children of John and Azuba (Buel) Guernsey: Isaac born Jan. 25, 1758; Azubeh born July 6, 1759 married Daniel Green; Sarah born Aug. 30, 1760 married Higley Roswell; Lois born June 1, 1762 in Dutchess Co., NY married Joseph Potter; Rachel born 1763 at Amenia, NY married ? Powers; Ebenezer born 1765 at Amenia, NY; Rhoda born 1767 at Amenia, NY married Frederick Goodell; John born 1768 at Amenia, NY; Peter born 1770 at Amenia, NY; Joseph born 1772 at Amenia NY; Lydia born 1772 at Amenia, NY married Elijah Smith; Ezekiel born 1775 at Amenia, NY; Samuel born 1776; Anna born 1770 married ? Powell; David born February 26, 1781 at New City, NY.

Frederick Goodell came from CT in 1787 and settled on the Susquehanna River three miles above Windsor, NY. In 1798 he removed to the Randolph section on land owned by his father-in-law, John Guernsey. This section was a wilderness then. Their son Ezekiel was a local Methodist minister. They had two other sons, Samuel and William. The first death in the town of Windsor was Rhoda Guernsey Goodell who died July 11, 1803, aged 37 years. He died April 1806 aged 45 years. They are buried in the Lester cemetery. The first Methodist sermon was preached at the home of Mr. Jewett in 1799 and a class was formed soon after. Among the members were Frederick Goodell and wife Rhoda and son William. Mr. Goodell had been raised a Congregationalist while his wife was a Baptist from Dutchess Co., NY. The class was organized at the home of Roswell Higley.

Roswell Higley settled early in the town of Windsor in what was then known as the Higley settlement, two miles west of Windsor in 1820 and again from 1826-1828.

About 1797 Ezekiel Guernsey located in the town of Windsor and practiced medicine about two years. The then returned to Dutchess Co., NY from whence he had come.

When the Presbyterian Church was organized at what is now called Colesville in the town of Windsor in 1793 David and Isaac Guernsey were listed as members.

Ebenezer and John Guernsey are listed as members of the Albany County Militia (Land Bounty Rights) Sixth Regiment. Also Joseph Potter.

John Guernsey's 1000 acres on the west side of the Susquehanna River was left to his sons but has since passed from the family.

Joseph Guernsey married Sarah Rexford of Windsor, NY. They came to the north boundary of Brooklyn, PA adjoining Bridgewater where he built a residence. He built a carding mill in Brooklyn on the Hop Bottom Creek. He died suddenly away from home which he had left only a short time before. Their children were: Hiram C. born 1801 at Brooklyn, PA and died there in 1871, married Maria R. Watrous, daughter of Benjamin C. and Lucy (Spencer) Watrous. She was born Feb 9, 1807 at Middleburg, Schoharie Co., N and came with her parents to Bridgewater in 1818. They had eleven children: Joseph W, a soldier in the War of 1812; Sophia who married Peter Williams: Eliza who married William Alworth; Levi; John M. and Peter B.

Note: History of Brooklyn, PA by E. A. Weston. Mr. Weston is incorrect. Joseph's parents-wrong wife to John and if they did come from the Isle of Guernsey it was some five generations earlier.

Addendum: Names of children of John and Ann (Peck) Guernsey as follows: Anna, Peter, Nathan, Dorcas, Noah, Lois, John-born Oct. 28, 1734, Daniel, Eunice and Isaac.

home Grandad ever owned. He always rented, I've forgotten why - dad [Robert Trexler Ives] told me that). The farm was supposed to be home for Uncle Bill, who was studying agriculture at Penn State, but when Bill met Mae Bryden, she announced she'd never live on a farm. Aunt Margaret had recently married Uncle Harold, they had two small children, and they moved to Dalton to help run the place. Jim was only in grade school, and my dad (Robert) was a highschool student who dropped out of school to assist Bill with the chores. Grandad commuted to Scranton in those months, to his job at the First National Bank (11 miles), and Harold commuted to his job at the Lackawanna Trust Co. I assume Warren was in the Philadelphia area starting his career with Woolworth. You father [Charles Heebner Ives] left from Dalton for his army service, but like all his brothers and sister was born in Scranton. The post script to that whole story is that our cousin, "

NOTE -- personal communication from SueAnne McClory, 20 May 2017 --

"Re the story about the farm by Marion Willis - My grandparents did not live there after they had children. Uncle Harold was born in Scranton in January 1915 and my mother was born in Clarks Summit in October, 1916 so my grandparents only lived on the farm for a brief time between when they were married in April 1913 to before Uncle Harold was born. When they did live there in the beginning, they lived in a tent on the property - the house will full of all of the Ives clan. I would assume the tent dwelling was not in the winter - so it would have been for a brief time (this information from my mother,)

Also, the farm was in Glenburn, not Dalton. Disputed is whether they actually even owned the property because my grandmother's (Anna Margaret Ives Doud) speaks of renewing the lease/option. But I do know my grandfather invested in it and that investment did not do well. The Ives actually lived there for much longer than 18 months - family information show they were there from not long after my grandparents married in 1913 and were back in Scranton during the Flu Epidemic in 1918 Those are not specific dates, but a general idea that they apparently were there for 3-4 years.

As for how Granddad Ives got the money to invest in the farm - he had gone to CA in early 1913 to visit Frances Bloom Swan, a wealthy woman with connections to the Ives family. Two of her sisters had married two of Albert Granger Ives' brothers. Apparently he did receive money from her - whether it was a loan or a gift is not known. Interesting too that Frances Swan was listed as a guest at the wedding of William Ives to Mae Bryden."

From personal communication, Sue McClory, 16 Dec 2009: --

"David - I though you would like to see this as I think it gives a peek into the personality of Albert G. Ives (see letter from Albert G. Ives to Jane Doud Warr, in Albert Granger Ives' Mdia File). There had been a huge celebration for their 50th wedding anniversary at my grandmother's home. My mother played the piano for the party.

Mom also tells of her grandfather taking the children to the bank vault where they were allowed to reach into a bag of pennies and keep as many pennies as they could hold in their hands (wouldn't have been many).

Another great story Mom tells is of going to her grandparent's home in Scranton, probably during the Depression. She says there would be a man sitting in the kitchen eating a meal. That was because the hobos would be going through on the trains and probably the house was marked as a place to go for food. They would come to her back door and she would invite them down and feed them!"

Additional information for Esther Phoebe Heebner:

From SueAnne Warr McClory, 29 Oct 2010:

Uncle Warren and Aunt Marjorie used to take his parents, Albert G. and Esther fishing in Maine. Warren and Granddad Ives would fish while Marjorie entertained Grandma Ives. While dining in a restaurant, Esther order cake, took one bite of it and pushed it away - "this has spirits in it."
